WORTMAN AID AND EX-EMPLOYEE SOUGHT IN PISTOL SEIZURE OF AUTO

Arrest Orders Out for Manager of Terrace Lounge and Former Doorman — Car
Taken From Garage.

Arrest orders were out today for Tony DiMartino, manager of the Terrace Lounge on the East Side, and for Kenneth Mueller, former doorman there, in connection with seizure of an automobile at pistol point Saturday from an East St. Louis garage.

A third man has been tentatively identified as one of those who took the machine, Police Commissioner Russell T. Beebe of East St. Louis said. The man lives in East St. Louis.

Robbery Warrant Issued. Beebe announced that a warrant charging DiMartino with armed robbery has been issued by the state's attorney's office of St. Clair county. The charge was based on the theft of a short-wave radio, which was taken from the garage at the time the automobile was removed.

The automobile, a 1955 Oldsmobile, had been towed to England's garage, 805 Exchange avenue, on police order after it was found illegally parked in a bus zone near the entrance of the Terrace Lounge, night club at 127 Collinsville avenue. The Terrace Lounge is operated by Frank (Buster) Wortman, notorious gangster. Mueller and his friend, Birney T. (Chick) Haver Jr., former manager of the club, were the targets of gunmen last May after they helped establish a racing news information service in competition with Wortman's gambling activities.

5 Men Show Pistols. Arrest orders for DiMartino and Mueller were issued by East St. Louis police after they had interviewed James Riley, manager of England's garage, and two other employees who were present when the automobile was taken by five men, each of whom displayed an automatic pistol.

Police reported that when the automobile was being "tagged" for illegal parking, a man rushed out of the Terrace Lounge and talked to the officers. While he did so, someone in the night club called out: "Tony, come on in and okay a check."

A man of DeMartino's description was the one who pulled a telephone off the wall at England's garage and took away a short-wave radio set which was tuned in for police calls, garage employees told authorities.

The man, who appeared to be the leader of the group, said boastfully to his companions: "Do you want me to tell these guys at the garage who I am?"

One of the other men advised him not to, and the five jumped into the Oldsmobile and sped away. The man answering Mueller's description had facial scars similar to those Mueller carries.

British Foreign Office 'Presumes' Missing Diplomats Were Spies

Ex-Soviet Agent Petrov Says Burgess and MacLean Gave Documents to Russians by 'Briefcase Full.'

LONDON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Foreign Office said today it "must be presumed" that two missing British diplomats—Guy Burgess and Donald MacLean—stole secret documents and turned them over to the Russians.

A spokesman told a news conference a government white paper will be issued on the case which has been kept hush-hush since the diplomats vanished four years ago.

Breaking a long silence after the British press stirred up a furor, the Foreign Office admitted last night "we believe" Burgess and MacLean were Soviet spies for years before their defection.

The admission came after Vladimir Petrov, head of a Soviet espionage ring in Australia who defected to the West, wrote in the newspaper The People that Burgess and MacLean had been spies all the time they were in government service and skipped when they found out they were under investigation.

"On the basis of Petrov's evidence it is presumptive that they took away documents and that they might have been photographed and passed on to some one, presumably the Soviet contact," the spokesman said.

The Foreign Office spokesman refused to elaborate on the nature of the documents. Both men were in a position to know many British-American secrets.

(The United Press said MacLean was secretary after World War II of a combined policy committee that constantly reviewed nuclear developments for the United States, Britain and Canada, and may have passed to the Russians official documents that included atomic secrets.)

The spokesman said the documents "presumably were borrowed from the Foreign Office, taken away, photographed and returned within a short time."

Asked whether they were of great importance, the spokesman said:

"It would be much easier to answer that question if we knew what documents had been photographed."

Petrov said the Communists recruited the two 20 years ago.

SEA ELEPHANT'S DEATH IS LAID TO RUPTURED LIVER

The zoo's female sea elephant was found dead Friday, and an autopsy report today showed death was caused by a ruptured liver, Zoo Director George P. Vierheller announced.

He said the animal was completing a two-week rest period in a concrete house north of the water fowl lake before being returned to the sea lion pool when the death occurred.

Although the sea elephant had to be forced fed for extended periods, Vierheller said the finicky eating habits did not cause the liver trouble. The loss is covered by insurance.

The female arrived in April with its pup, which died in May, and a 2500-pound bull, Moby Dick, the female weighed 1500 pounds. Moby, thriving on 600 pounds of herring a day, has become a big attraction.

4 TABLE TENNIS SETS TO BE USED AT WORKHOUSE

Four sets of table tennis equipment will be purchased for use at the Workhouse last week. The equipment was bought from commissary funds. The basketball equipment is portable and can be moved inside when the weather is inclement.

Table tennis is expected to prove popular as indoor recreation for the prisoners, Baynes said.

They will play basketball, volleyball and touch football in the center yard. A cellulose wall is being used as a handball court.

A course in weight-lifting will be given to interested prisoners.

WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

LONDON, Sept. 19 (UP)—Grocer Tom Seagrave put a sign in his shop window today bearing the names of two customers and the declaration: "They owe me money."

"A lot of people owe me money," he said. "I will put their names in the window, at a time, and shame them into paying."

Hell's Canyon Is Controversial Even on How to Spell Its Name

BOISE, Idaho, Sept. 19 (AP)—The nation's deepest canyon is also its most controversial. There's even disagreement on how to spell its name.

"We always spell it Hell's Canyon," says Sam Fretwell of Parma, Idaho. He's chairman of the Idaho-Oregon-Washington Hell's Canyon Association, a group that wants to see a federal dam constructed in the Snake river gorge bordering Idaho and Oregon.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE IN DEATH OF FOUR FIREMEN

Tractor-Trailer Driver Says He Didn't Hear Truck's Siren or See Flashing Light.

Orville E. Freeze, driver of a tractor-trailer that crashed into a fire truck and killed four firemen at Kingshighway and Manchester avenue early yesterday, told the Post-Dispatch today he did not hear the truck's siren or see its flashing red light as he drove into the intersection with a green light in his favor.

He was charged with manslaughter in four separate warrants, and with careless driving, failing to yield the right-of-way to an emergency vehicle, and destruction of city property.

He was at liberty today under bonds totaling $5500, and scheduled to appear at an inquest tomorrow.

The victims, members of Engine Company No. 36, at Kingshighway and Christy boulevard, were:

Robert E. Geisler, 5520 Alaska street, 56.

Capt. Frank C. Jones, 5438 Rhodes avenue, 58.

John Hawkins Craig, 5403 Nagel avenue, 59.

This was the worst crash in the history of the department.

The worst previous one was June 8, 1952, when three firemen were killed and six others were injured in a collision of a hook-and-ladder truck and a pumper at Vandeventer and Easton avenues.

Freeze, who lives at Wentzville, drives a mail truck between Springfield, Mo., and St. Louis. It is owned by Arnold J. Winfrey of Troy, Mo.

Freeze had made a delivery at the Main Post Office.

HURRICANE HITS NORTH CAROLINA, MAY BE WORST STORM OF YEAR

107-Mile Wind Pounds Beaches, Sweeps Inland — Heavy Rains Bring Fear of Floods.

HATTERAS, N.C., Sept. 19 (AP)—Hurricane Ione swept inland over the North Carolina coast today and headed northward. Violent winds and high tides pounded beaches and towns. Rain deluged areas far in front of the storm center.

The Cherry Point Marine air station recorded gusts of 107 miles an hour as this hurricane, the third to strike the Atlantic coast in six weeks, passed almost directly across the base.

The big storm headed for Virginia. Hurricane warnings were hoisted from Wilmington, N.C., to Block Island, R.I., and over the inland waters of Long Island sound, Delaware and Chesapeake bays.

The Weather Bureau in the District of Columbia said today the center of hurricane Ione is expected to reach Washington around midnight tonight.

Its advisory continued: "This is the strongest and largest hurricane to pass northward through the middle Atlantic states in recent years and except for slower movement may be compared with hurricane Hazel of last October. No great loss of intensity is expected during today and tonight."

Lighthouse Torn Loose. The Coast Guard reported that the Diamond shoals lightship, 20 miles east of Cape Hatteras, was torn loose from its moorings. The ship has a crew of 16. The vessel reported it was under way in fighting the storm.

The Coast Guard cutters remain on its station despite high seas. The Coast Guard cutter Mendota, riding the hurricane's trail since yesterday, was ordered to proceed to the lightship at full speed and to stand by.

Apprehension swept the North Atlantic seaboard. The New York City weather bureau predicted winds of hurricane force—above 72 m.p.h.—"very likely" would hit the metropolitan area tonight. Meteorologists in other eastern cities joined the grim warning chorus.

The latest advisory said: "Tides over Chesapeake bay will rise to four to seven feet above normal tonight. Along the coast from Virginia northward to Long Island tides may run six to eight feet above normal with dangerously heavy seas."

Heavy rains attending this storm may give amounts of three to four inches generally with local amounts of five to eight inches in eastern sections of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

"This will result in dangerous flooding in small streams and all precautions should be taken."

The Washington Weather Bureau located the storm about 75 miles west of Cape Hatteras. It said the storm had been moving erratically as it moved west.

At about 12 miles an hour. Highest winds in squalls near the center were estimated at more than 100 miles an hour.

Hurricane force winds extend 100 miles east of the storm center and about 75 miles to the west and south. The movement is expected to be generally in a northerly direction at 12 to 18 hours, although it might turn slightly north northeast.

"Dangerous Storm." The Weather Bureau called Ione a "dangerous storm" and warned all interests to remain alert for later advice.

Cape Hatteras was swamped by 4.78 inches of rain in 24 hours as the ninth tropical hurricane of the season arrived.

Up and down the coast the Navy made its ships secure or ordered them to sea to escape an inevitable pounding. Air stations, too, were evacuated.

The Red Cross deployed 70 disaster experts into the Carolinas to set up relief centers and 20 more were sent into Maryland and Delaware.

Torrential rains flooded streets and highways, tore out communications lines, isolating many communities, and the high tides and pounding waves clawed again at the North Carolina beaches.

Ione reached the mainland just east of Morehead City, North Carolina's second port, where it was met by a telephone line to Morehead City were down, but scanty

ROBBERS BIND GUARD, BREAK OPEN TWO SAFES

$3000 to $4000 Stolen From Meat Company Offices in Basement of Union Market.

Between $3000 and $4000 was obtained last night by robbers who tied up a city watchman at Union Market and battered open two safes in the basement offices of the Will Docter Meat Co.

August Petry, the watchman, reported he was seated outside the market, at Sixth street and Lucas avenue, shortly after 8 o'clock when he heard a noise and went inside to investigate.

He was grabbed by two men who tied his hands behind his back with cord and covered his eyes and mouth with adhesive tape. The robbers took him to the basement and forced him to lie on the floor.

Using a variety of tools, which they left behind, the robbers hammered on the two safes, in separate offices, until the doors came off. They took the contents, representing cash and receipts from late Friday and Saturday's business, both retail and wholesale. Howard Hess, general manager, said records were being checked to determine the exact sum taken.

A passerby called police after seeing a man in the market. When officers arrived Petry had freed himself and was preparing to summon police. Although Petry, who lives at 3201 Portis avenue, saw only two men, police think there were four robbers.

Cash totaling $1400 and other loot was taken last night from two drug stores by burglars, police reported today.

At 1501 Benton street, the store of Charles H. Zimmermann, burglars climbed to the roof of a one-story building next door, entered the second floor and forced two doors leading to the first floor. They drilled a safe, removed the combination and took cash and blank money orders. In 1953 Zimmermann routed a robber with a broom and last year he fired pistol shots at two holdup men, who fled with $735.

The store of Herman Spivack, 4958 Maryland avenue, was entered by forcing a lock on the front door. Burglars carried away a cash register, which Spivack valued at $1700, and $500 in the register.

INSURGENT THREAT TO SHELL CAPITAL FORCES DECISION

Rebel Fleet Stands Off Buenos Aires Ready to Fire — Gen. Lucero Says He Has Named Loyalist Peace Negotiators.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 19 (UP)—Juan D. Peron's nine-year personal rule of Argentina apparently has ended.

His government announced today that he would resign. He took that action under the guns of a rebel fleet which stood in battle array off Buenos Aires, threatening to bombard the city unless Peron stepped down.

The rebel radio at Cordoba said Peron had sought political asylum in the Paraguayan embassy in Buenos Aires.

The news that Peron had decided to give up in the fourth day of the Argentine civil war was broadcast over the official Argentine radio in Buenos Aires.

Gen. Franklin Lucero, minister of war, in announcing Peron's decision to resign, said: "His spirit of battle prompts him to fight, but his patriotism and love of the people induce him to renounce all personal ambition."

Reads Peron Statement. Lucero read a statement by Peron which said:

"A few days ago I tried to leave the Government if that would be a solution to the present political problems. "Circumstances known to the public prevented me from doing this."

"Now, as before, I continue to think that I (should) insist in my attitude, in offering this solution."

He suggested that the army "take charge of the situation." In making "every personal renunciation" of his role in the government, Peron said he took the action "in the face of the threat to bomb the priceless possessions of the nation and its innocent population."

Opposition to Peron's regime, building up since he began a second term in 1954, was the Catholic church last November, broke into open revolt June 16. That revolt was put down after bloody fighting. The present rebellion was the fourth since the July 16 outbreak. Beginning last Friday, it spread rapidly through the provinces.

Face of government broadcasts saying it was being controlled. Lucero played his last card at about the time a rebel ultimatum was due to expire. The ultimatum, the first would shell Buenos Aires unless Peron quit. Lucero offered to negotiate a cease-fire, and invited the rebel leaders to go into Buenos Aires and confer in his office.

He would not start armed units. Peron resigned unconditionally. But they did offer to send a ship into Buenos Aires, take Lucero aboard and talk with him aboard a warship in the estuary of the Rio de la Plata.

Gen. Lucero later announced he had named a board of officers to negotiate in his stead with the rebels aboard a warship for an end of hostilities.

Text of Broadcast. The offer to negotiate a cease-fire was made in Lucero's name and was broadcast by the official radio in Buenos Aires. The broadcast said:

"Gen. Franklin Lucero, commander-in-chief of the forces of repression, in the name of the most excellent president of the republic and commander-in-chief of the armed forces (Peron), in view of the ultimatum to bomb the city of Buenos Aires and petroleum refineries at Eva Peron and to avoid further bloodshed, invites the commanders in action to appear at the office of the high command in the ministry of the Army to begin immediate negotiations to settle the conflict."

He also invites the said commanders to cease hostilities immediately at their present positions."

Rebels Repeat Demands. Meantime the rebel fleet broadcasts continued to hammer away with demands for Peron's resignation.

"The moment we so earnestly desired has arrived," one broadcast said. "Peron must recognize that he cannot continue to be President of all Argentines. Let him resign. Let all troops which have not surrendered do so. Peron must realize that at this moment all

BAPTIST CLERIC AND 3 CATHOLIC PRIESTS FREED BY CHINA REDS

Their Release Brings to 7 Number of American Civilians to Reach Hong Kong Since Friday.

HONG KONG, Sept. 19 (AP)—An American Baptist missionary held prisoner by the Chinese Communists almost five years crossed the border to freedom on his sixty-seventh birthday today. He was reunited here with his wife. It was her sixty-fifth birthday.

The Rev. Levi A. Lovegren of Cherry Grove, Ore., was the seventh American civilian freed by the Chinese Reds since Friday. The Communists promised during recent negotiations with the United States at Geneva to release American civilians still in China.

Shouts of "happy birthday" greeted the Rev. Mr. Lovegren as he came across the bridge between Hong Kong and Communist China. His wife, Ida, and a daughter, Mildred, were waiting in the police station on the road to the city.

Entering the station, the graying missionary stopped and stared silently at the two women. Then they rushed into one another's arms. As the family left the police station, 70 policemen sang "Happy Birthday to You."

3 Priests Freed.
Three American Roman Catholic priests—the Rev. Frederick A. Gordon of Somerset, O.; the Rev. Joseph E. Hyde of Lowell, Mass., and the Rev. James G. Joyce—arrived on the train from Canton yesterday. They had been held under house arrest more than two years by the Chinese Reds.

Father Gordon was accused of shielding counter-revolutionaries. Father Hyde of spreading propaganda and Father Joyce of collecting information on airfields.

The Rev. Mr. Lovegren, who was arrested in Chungking in January 1951, and sentenced to five years on charges of spying, said the Communists co-operated in getting him to Hong Kong in time for his birthday.

Denies He Was Agent.
In an interview he said: "I am a missionary. They accused me of being an agent. I was not. I am a missionary. I denied all charges. I showed a statement implicating myself but refuted it a year ago and have continued to deny it."

"I was guilty according to their laws, but not American law. In fact, I signed things all the time. They told me it was the only way to get out."

"They wanted me to say I was sent there by the Americans. This I denied. I said and I write that it was not so and I told them I could prove it, but they never believed me."

The missionary said he was not tortured but "they rode us pretty hard to get us to admit things."

He said he was accused of collecting and sending information to his mission board, the Cooperative Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

Former O.S.S. Man.
"Some of this information was of military nature concerning China's civil war," he said. "As a former Office of Strategic Services man, my reports would have naturally taken on a military nature."

He said he filed a report to his mission board secretary on China's internal, political and military situation which later was forwarded to Washington.

"I sent some military information before the Communists arrived," he said, "not much but a little. I sent nothing after the Communists arrived, although I took some pictures."

The missionary, his wife and daughter went to the Women's Home at Kowloon for a birthday dinner and cake.

Mrs. Lovegren, who spent 20 years with her husband in China, left when the Reds took over the mainland in 1949 and has lived here since. Another daughter, Mrs. Edith Lambert, is the wife of a Baptist minister at Minot, N. D.

Priests' Comments.
The three Catholic priests had been held at the southeast China river port of Foochow, one of the areas threatening the offshore Nationalist-held Matsu Islands.

They were questioned intermittently for long periods and asked "all sorts of questions except who killed Cock Robin," Father Gordon said. He said they were told last Wednesday they were to be expelled from China immediately.

"There was no trial," the priest reported, "just a reading of a sentence."

"We did sign something," he added, "but we would rather sign anything than stay in China."

EISENHOWER GOES TROUT FISHING ON COLORADO RANCH

FRASER, Colo., Sept. 19 (AP)—President Eisenhower arrived here from Denver for at least five more days of trout fishing and another crack at the job of head chef, a role he loves.

It was 30 early today in Fraser, 70 miles northwest of Denver on the western slope of the Continental divide. That was the coldest temperature reported in the nation.

The President will be the guest again of an old friend, Denver investment banker Axel Nielsen.

Fishing for trout in swift running St. Louis creek is the President's chief relaxation at Fraser, but he also takes along his golf clubs and gets in some practice with his irons in the cow pasture. Another hobby he pursues at the ranch is painting.

Over the weekend the President and a group of top eastern business executives who were his guest went off for some skeet shooting a few miles north of Denver. Afterward the President cooked steaks for the crowd.

BULGANIN REPORTS HE TOOK OFF 46 POUNDS IN 40 DAYS

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 (AP)—Premier Bulganin, who has recently been ill, said last night he lost 46 pounds in 40 days—in athletics.

Bulganin and other top Soviet leaders chatted with diplomats and newsmen at a reception given by the Finnish embassy in honor of Finland's President Juho Paasikivi and Foreign Minister Urho Kekkonen.

Bulganin said to Richard Kasichke, an Associated Press reporter: "You are getting fat on the Soviet economy, but I am getting thin. I have lost 21 kilograms (46 pounds) in 40 days. But I feel OK now. No, it was not Chancellor Adenauer who overworked me."

Some of the Soviet leaders laughed when Bulganin told of losing his poundage. Most of the other Soviet leaders, notably Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev and First Deputy Premier L. M. Kaganovich, are putting on weight.

ISLES OFF CHINA SHELLED

TAIPEI, Formosa, Sept. 19 (AP)—Nationalist China's defense ministry said Communist artillery on Amoy Island fired 50 shells today at Nationalist Little Quemooy and Chuyu Islands.

The ministry said Nationalist artillery silenced the Red guns. It said the only Nationalist casualty was one horse.

not say what at this moment."

Father Gordon told newsmen he saw no military activity as he was brought out and that during his long questioning he told his captors "I had no information on Foochow airfield or any other airfield."

The Communists have been reported enlarging the Foochow field for jet planes.

He said he supposed to stay in their rooms, 10 feet square, but were allowed in the garden in the last two months provided they did not talk to one another, the priest said.

All Lost Weight.
"Our diet during the early part of house arrest was not up to normal," he said. "We would get whatever vegetables there were in the market. We had eggs and bread and rice if we wanted it."

He said food improved in recent months and they got Red Cross parcels the last two months of captivity.

Father Gordon said he had lost 10 to 15 pounds and Father Joyce 30 pounds. Friends said Father Hyde appeared to have lost 50 pounds. Father Gordon is 57, Father Hyde 47 and Father Joyce 56.

Canadian Fisheries Minister James Sinclair and his aide, Alistair Fraser, also crossed the border en route home from a visit to Moscow and an inspection of Siberian fisheries.

Sinclair, who was seriously injured in a fall while inspecting a drydock at Petropavlosk, was carried across in a sedan chair. Fraser said his chief is "okay from the hips up, but hasn't recovered yet from a fractured left leg, cuts to his right leg and slight immobility caused by a nervous injury when he fell on his back."

RED CHINA CLOSER TO WINNING SEAT, U.N. CHIEF SAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (UP)—Dag Hammarskjöld, United Nations Secretary General, said yesterday recent actions by Red China have brought "closer" conditions under which he would favor its admission to the U.N.

He made the statement on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press."

Hammarskjöld was reminded of his previous statement that the Chinese Reds should be in the U.N. provided certain "conditions" were met. He was asked if the conditions had been met.

The Secretary General replied that "we have partly seen the conditions develop." He cited the Peiping government's release of 15 United States airmen and its agreement to free 41 American civilians.

"Developments of that kind have definitely moved us closer to the conditions I had in mind," Hammarskjöld said.

He declined to predict, however, whether the issue of Red China's admission to the U.N. would be threshed out in the General Assembly meeting starting here tomorrow.

MOLOTOV EXPECTS POSITIVE RESULTS FROM U.N. SESSION

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov said today he expects "positive results" from the U.N. General Assembly session starting tomorrow.

Asked what would happen on the Soviet-Western, deadlock over new members, Molotov replied, "It will be discussed."

He was interviewed as he left U.N. headquarters after a half-hour courtesy visit to Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld.

Molotov said Friday in the general debate, in which delegates give their government's view on U.N. issues.

On his arrival in New York yesterday, Molotov said: "I have gained the impression that the road from Moscow to New York now has become better and smoother."

SOVIETS TO KEEP 'PEACE' ARMY IN EAST GERMANY

Russians to Stay Until NATO Troops Quit West Germany, Ulbricht Says.

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 (UP)—East Germany's top Communist said today Russian troops will remain in East Germany until NATO troops are withdrawn from West Germany.

Communist party chief Walter Ulbricht added that his government also will raise its own "armed forces."

Ulbricht, who is East Germany's deputy premier, spoke before the East German-Soviet conference which put the finishing touches on an East German "state treaty." The treaty, which is to be signed tomorrow, restores East Germany to "full independence."

Ulbricht declared that the treaty will grant East Germany "full freedom" in its domestic and foreign policies, especially in its relations with the West German Federal Republic.

Ulbricht also asserted that the new Soviet-East German pact will invalidate all four-power laws on Germany and give the Soviet zone government control of the routes between West Germany and isolated West Berlin.

"We are agreed that Soviet troops will remain on peace watch in the German Democratic Republic," Ulbricht said. "So long as the Western powers are not ready to withdraw their troops from Germany and liquidate their military bases, the presence of Soviet troops on the territory of the German Democratic Republic is necessary."

Ulbricht said the presence of Soviet troops will not lessen the responsibility of East Germans to defend their territory with its own armed forces. He said East Germany will fulfill its obligations and rights under the Warsaw treaty as soon as it builds an army.

Warsaw Alliance.
Informed sources said the new Soviet-East German treaty will link East Germany more firmly with Russia and the Warsaw treaty nations.

The pact also will boost East Germany to the same legal status as West Germany and seal the division of the country, these sources said.

The sources said the draft treaty will closely parallel some of the arrangements now in force between West Germany and Britain, France and the United States. East German Premier Gottewohl has asked

Sculptor Carl Milles Dies at 80, Designed Plaza Fountain Group

Succumbs at Home in Stockholm, Where He Founded Art Museum as Gift to People.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 19 (AP)—Sweden's famous sculptor and art collector, Carl Milles, died at his home here tonight. He was 80 years old.

He was professor of the Swedish Royal Academy of Arts from 1920 to 1931 and worked in the United States from 1929 until the end of World War II, when he moved to Rome.

He founded the Art Museum Milles Garden in Stockholm for his own work and art collection, which he donated to the Swedish people. His home was adjacent to the museum.

Created Fountain Group Symbolizing Confluence of Rivers.
Carl Milles designed the multi-figured fountain on Aloe Plaza opposite Union Station to symbolize the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers. After their unveiling in 1940 and even before their completion the figures were the subject of lengthy controversy over their nudity.

In 1931 the City Art Museum purchased for $17,000 Milles' 12-foot-high equestrian bronze statue of Folke Filbyter, legendary hero of medieval Sweden, which stands in Sculpture court at the museum.

The figure is a replica of the central figure of the fountain at Linköping, Sweden, dedicated in 1927. The St. Louis museum in 1931 presented the first comprehensive Milles exhibition in this country.

TOP U.S. OFFICIALS DISCUSS ECONOMIC POLICY IN EUROPE
PARIS, Sept. 19 (UP)—Top United States economic officials led by George M. Humphrey, Secretary of the Treasury, met here today for a review of United States economic policy in Europe.

Humphrey flew here from a meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Istanbul, Turkey, to preside at the opening session of the three-day meeting.

Leading American economic officials in 20 European countries were assembled for sessions which a spokesman said would "give United States field officers an opportunity to discuss current United States economic programs and policies among themselves and with officials from Washington."

Mustache Wax Gets Ahead.
PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 19 (UP)—Barbers at Port Huron said they are having their first run on sales of mustache wax in years. They said teen-agers have found the wax is perfect to make a crew haircut stand up straight.

State Department Comment on Zhukov's Suggestion.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—The State Department today brushed off Soviet Defense Minister Georgi K. Zhukov's suggestion that the United States give up its foreign military bases now that Russia is returning its Porkkala naval base to Finland.

Department spokesman Lincoln White said when reporters asked for comment on Zhukov's suggestion:

"I have no comment other than to point out the obvious, namely that the Soviet naval base at Porkkala was established against the wishes of the Finnish people and that it is less than 50 miles from the Soviet mainland."

U.S. IS STALLING GENEVA TALKS, CHINA RED SAYS

Negotiator Also Asserts That No Chinese Have Been Returned From America.

GENEVA, Sept. 19 (UP)—Communist China accused the United States of trying to stall in negotiations here and claimed no Chinese had been returned from America despite the agreement on an exchange of civilians.

The Peiping negotiator in the seven-week talks also demanded a meeting be called "without delay" between Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

Chinese Communist Ambassador Wang Ping-nan labeled a "regrettable" a public statement made on the Geneva talks last week by the United States negotiator, Ambassador U. Alexis Johnson.

Johnson had refused to leave the prisoner exchange matter—the first item on the talks agenda—and go on to the second item, "other practical matters at issue," until all the civilians had been returned.

If such a procedure is followed, Wang said, "it will render it impossible to carry on any further Sino-United States talks during a long period of time."

Conference circles were mystified by the Communist allegation that no Chinese had been returned to the Red-held mainland.

Some 4000 Chinese students were in the United States when the Communists seized mainland China from the Nationalists. Most of them elected to stay in the United States.

Only a handful of the students have taken advantage of the United States offer to repatriate them if they wish. Of these, approximately 40 were put across the border into Red China this summer.

Seven of 41 American civilians the Reds have promised to release have been allowed to leave China.

CLAYTON BOOM SAID TO REDUCE UNIVERSITY CITY REALTY VALUES

Co-Owner of Apartments on Delmar Asks Cut in Assessment—Says 10 or 15 Nearby Stores Are Vacant.

Development of Clayton as a business and shopping center has caused commercial property to decline in value along Delmar boulevard in University City, the State Tax Commission was told today by a University City apartment owner.

Charles Glassman, co-owner of two apartment buildings at 6255-63 Delmar, told members of the commission who are hearing appeals against higher property assessments that there are "10 to 15" vacancies in stores in his area, the result of competition from Clayton.

Glassman protested against the new assessment of his property at $69,640, saying that the buildings were worth about $70,000 and that the assessment thus was far above the 30 per cent of value which has been established as a minimum for the county.

The previous assessment was $43,520, he said. Glassman told the commission, which is sitting at Clayton, that his property has little if any commercial value.

McHaney Complaint.
An attorney for Powell B. McHaney, president of General American Insurance Co., entered a protest against the increase in assessment from $17,880 to $27,810 of McHaney's home, 2 Ridgemoor drive, Moorlands Park, Clayton. The proper assessment of the two-story nine-room house should be $10,500, it was argued.

J. Gregory Driscoll, a real estate appraiser, said the fair market value of the house, built in 1927, was about $35,000. Cost of reconstructing the building, which he described as "slightly English" in design, would be "terrific," Driscoll said. McHaney, who did not appear, is president of Civic Progress, Inc., St. Louis civic organization.

Protest on Ladue Home.
An attorney for Dr. and Mrs. Louis F. Aitken protested against an assessed valuation of $45,000 for their house at 12 St. Andrews road, Ladue, which he said was worth $35,000. The attorney, Ralph F. Piper, said the assessment was above the 30 per cent minimum.

The commission also heard the appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Koplow, complaining against an assessed valuation of $17,216 for their house at 1 Larkdale drive, Ladue, and $21,776 for the lot.

They said through their attorney, E. G. Shiffrin, that a proper assessment would be $11,651. The house was built in 1954 at a cost of $31,583, it was testified.

Huntleigh Village Complaint.
John H. Leaver protested against the increased valuation of his house at 2 Dunlora lane, Huntleigh Village. The assessment was raised from $18,550 to $31,300. The two-story house, containing nine rooms and three baths, was built in 1935, it was testified.

Most of the cases arise from the commission's July order for St. Louis county real estate assessments to be brought up to 30 per cent of actual value. This involved a general rise of 60 per cent on city lots and 85 per cent on rural acreage and was applied by the County Board of Equalization as a blanket increase.

Fire Truck, Victims and Driver in Fatal Crash

Eighteenth and Market streets, and was on his way to Wentzville when the crash occurred, at 5:50 a.m., just before dawn.

The fire truck was going north in Kingshighway, to replace one that had gone to a fire, and Freeze was going west in Manchester. Both vehicles were traveling about 30 miles an hour, witnesses said.

About half a block from the intersection, Freeze told police, he saw that the traffic light was red and slowed down. Just as he approached Kingshighway the light changed to green and he resumed his speed.

He was just entering the intersection when he saw the fire engine and slammed on his brakes, too late, about 40 feet short of the point of impact. The front of the mail truck plunged into the fire truck, a pumper, just ahead of the center and knocked it about 80 feet to the northwest.

Lands in Driveway.

The fire truck veered around and turned over on its right side, in the driveway of a filling station at 1187 South Kingshighway. The firemen were thrown to the pavement.

Capt. Jones had been on the front seat with Nation, and Craig and Geisler were riding on the rear seat. Nation and Craig were dead when taken to City Hospital. Jones died at 8:25 a.m. and Geisler 15 minutes later.

Jones was able to make a brief statement. He said Nation was driving about 30 miles an hour, slowed down for the red light and then speeded up again.

Freeze's mail truck jackknifed and went about 10 feet past the point of impact. It did not turn over, but he was thrown from the cab and suffered a cut on the head and some bruises. He said he had been driving trucks of that type for five years and had never had an accident before.

The firemen's wives will receive $4000 each from the Uniformed Fire Fighters' Relief Association, which is supported by the annual Firemen's Rodeo, and monthly payments in varying amounts, depending on the amount of participation by the firemen. Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Nation are to receive $192 a month and Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Geisler $35.

The other member of that crew, Harry J. Brand, had the day off.

The men were to end a 24-hour shift between 7 and 7:30 a.m.

City Officials Visit Homes.
Acting Mayor Donald Gunn and Joseph F. Sestric, director of public safety, visited the homes of the victims and offered their condolences.

Sestric said there has been a growing tendency among motorists not to yield the right-of-way to emergency vehicles of all kinds. This can be corrected only by an educational program to show the necessity of clearing the way, he added.

Replacement runs have long been considered emergencies, he explained.

A witness to the crash, Bradford J. Chandler, 4311A Swan avenue, said he was driving east in Manchester and stopped short of Kingshighway when he heard the siren and saw the flashing red light of the fire engine.

"I didn't pay much attention to the mail truck because I was watching the fire truck," he said. "I thought it was going to stop, and then 'Na, he isn't going to stop!'"

"The truck smashed into the side of the fire engine and it slid for about one traffic lane and then turned over."

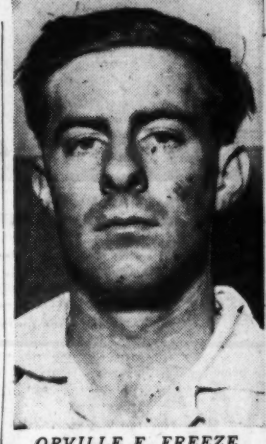

A customer of the filling station, Charles M. Gates, 1801A North Newstead avenue, was buying gasoline when a piece of metal crashed through the rear window of his automobile.

"The fire engine swerved and struck a water hydrant," he said. "I jumped into the car and threw my body over my 3-year-old son to protect him. There was no time to get him out. The fire engine stopped about a foot from the car. Fire hose was all over the place."

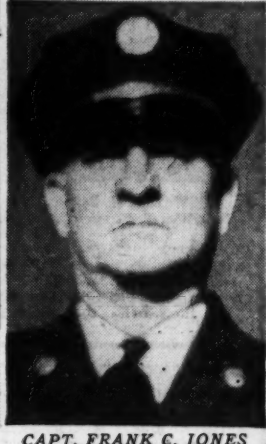

Ran to Save His Life.

The filling station attendant, O. C. Turner, said: "I saw that there was going to be a collision, and ran to keep from getting hit. The fire truck came to a stop about two feet from where I had been standing. Two of the firemen were thrown 30 to 40 feet from the truck."

Craig was planning to retire Oct. 2, his sixtieth birthday, after 34 years as a fireman. Geisler had been in the department 27 years, Capt. Jones 25.

CAPT. FRANK C. JONES and Nation six. Nation is survived also by a 12-year-old son, William Jr.

The Nation boy went to his father's station and picked up his best uniform for the funeral.

Engine Company No. 36 had sent its pumper to replace equipment being used at a fire at 4125 Westminster place, in which Arthur Kinzel suffered serious burns and his wife also suffered burns. He is a laborer, 47 years old.

The second alarm for that fire was sounded at 5:34 a.m. Mrs. Kinzel said she was awakened about 5 o'clock by smoke and found a fire in the living room. She awakened her husband and then ran out and alerted 11 other families living in the building.

Funeral services for Capt. Jones will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, at the Ziegenhein undertaking establishment; for Nation at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, at Hoffmeister's; for Hawkins at 1 p.m. Wednesday, at Ziegenhein's, and for Geisler at 10 a.m. Wednesday, at Hope Lutheran church.

GIRL CATCHES LEG IN PIPE, FIREMEN FREE HER IN HOUR

Patricia Torma, 3-year-old daughter of Joseph Torma, 7111 South Broadway, caught her right leg in a pipe to a water cutoff valve late Saturday night, and it took firemen more than an hour to free her.

She stepped into the four-inch pipe, cross the street from her home about 11 p.m. as she was alighting from the automobile of Mr. and Mrs. John Jost, 7111A South Broadway, who had taken her with them to visit friends.

After Jost tried unsuccessfully to get her loose, firemen were called. They had to break the concrete around the pipe, dig a hole and cut the pipe off just below Patricia's foot. Then, they removed her shoe and pulled the leg free.

Examination at City Hospital showed no injuries. Although she was so frightened she refused the offer of hot chocolate—one of her favorite drinks—Patricia tried to be brave during rescue efforts. And only on a few brief occasions did tears break through.

FREDERICK H. RIESMEYER, HEAD OF MOTOR FIRM, DIES

Frederick H. Riesmeyer, for 31 years president of the Riesmeyer Motor Co. of Webster Groves and Brentwood, died of a heart attack early today at his home, 4624 Pershing avenue. He was 63 years old.

A member of an old St. Louis family, Mr. Riesmeyer attended the old Manual Training School of Washington University and the University of Illinois. He was an enthusiastic duck-hunter and a member of the Racquet Club and the Old Warsaw Country Club. His father, Gustav Riesmeyer, who died in 1914, founded the G. Riesmeyer Distilling Co. here in 1883.

Surviving are his wife, the former Gladys Wendover; a son, David W. Riesmeyer, 760 North Kirkwood road, Kirkwood, and a brother, G. Riesmeyer Jr., 56 Fair Oaks, Ladue. Funeral arrangements are incomplete, pending the arrival of Mrs. Riesmeyer from Cooperstown, N.Y., where she has been visiting.

COUNTY-WIDE SEWAGE INQUIRY IS SUGGESTED

Grand Jury to Be Asked to Investigate Every Area of Stream Pollution.

A recommendation that the next St. Louis county grand jury be instructed to investigate "every area where there is stream pollution" will be made by County Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz, he said today.

The prosecutor pointed out that his office had received complaints from residents of Coldwater creek and Gravois creek watersheds, in addition to Maline creek, whose polluted condition was investigated by the last grand jury.

"As between Maline, Coldwater and Gravois, one smells about as bad as the other and they're all just about equal as a health menace," he continued. "My office has had reports that raw sewage is being dumped into all of them. We are not going to stop until these conditions are corrected. Too many people are involved."

"Not Going to Stop."
"While many financial problems face the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District, we're going to keep watching the situation and we're not going to stop until we see some new sewers built in this county."

The policy of County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews in barring new home construction in areas where pollution may be aggravated was praised by Garnholz, who said his office would co-operate in keeping this policy in effect.

The May term grand jury, in a partial report Sept. 9, criticized the metropolitan district for inaction in the Maline watershed and recommended that succeeding grand juries continue surveillance of the situation.

Circuit Judge Raymond E. LaDriere, who is expected to call the next grand jury, could not be reached immediately on whether he intended to summon a jury for the September term of court, which started today.

Cool Valley Sewer Break.
Immediate action to repair a break in a Cool Valley sewer was promised today by Norman Sewer District official after residents of a nearby subdivision, annoyed by stench which drove them indoors, tried in vain last night to close the crack in the concrete sewer with mud.

Leonard Meiners, district treasurer, said a complaint of the break, under the Washburn railroad tracks near Bermuda avenue, had been received last Wednesday and repairs ordered the following day, but that a maintenance contractor hired by the district apparently had not gotten around to the job yet.

"That's a very minor problem and the crack can be fixed in half an hour," Meiners said. "Those people in the subdivision just got ants because of the delay."

Dwight Young, 1117 Haley avenue, one of 10 householders who worked an hour and a half by flashlight piling mud over the crack, said it was bad enough to see the sewage continue to bubble through the mud.

"But when I slipped and fell into the slime in the creek bed below—that was really the end of a perfect day," he said.

SHE KEPT A DIARY OF TELEPHONE CALLS

Mrs. Martha Chance—homemaker, church worker, bowler, and keeper of a telephone diary that revealed an important fact.

Mrs. Chance finds the telephone a young homemaker's best friend

What one service helps the busy homemaker more different ways than any other?

Mrs. Martha Chance is sure she knows the answer. Her telephone. And for good reason. Mrs. Chance recently kept a week-long diary of telephone calls made and received in her home. The results surprised her.

Mrs. Chance listed 95 calls during the week. She estimates those calls traveled at least 200 miles for her. (Shown at the right are a few typical calls taken from Mrs. Chance's diary.) Not only did her calls save time and energy in managing her home, but many she found were actually the start of a pleasant afternoon or evening out.

In Mrs. Chance's own words, "It's so easy to take your telephone for granted. It's always there. You use it. You depend on it. But you just don't realize how much... until you stop and think about it as I have."

In our opinion, Mrs. Chance is right. Telephone service is a busy homemaker's best friend because it's such a wonderful time and work saver. It helps you get more things done, every day.

G.O.P. CALLOUS TO FARM SLUMP, BUTLER CHARGES

He Accuses Eisenhower of Aiding Big Business and Ignoring Agriculture.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (UP)—Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler charged the Eisenhower Administration today with taking a "callous" and "unsympathetic" attitude toward the "collapsing farm economy."

Butler accused President Eisenhower of extending "lavish help to his big business friends" while feeling "it is wrong and immoral to save the American farmer."

Butler issued a statement at the start of the first meeting of a 15-member Agricultural Advisory Committee he named to work out a Democratic farm policy. Republican leaders were meeting in the same hotel to discuss mechanics of their 1956 convention.

Butler attacked recent Republican statements on the farm price situation made by Vice President Nixon, Agriculture Secretary Benson, and G.O.P. National Chairman Leonard Hall.

"To me, their statements seem ill-tempered and unsympathetic, as if these officials were irritated with the farmers for spoiling the Administration's claims of universal prosperity," Butler said.

Assaults Morse Comment.

He said there has been "a whole series of callous statements" from the Administration on farm policy, starting with a remark by under secretary of Agriculture True Morse "that the small farmer is a defect, ought to be plowed under."

Then Butler said an economic advisor to Benson remarked that "the impoverished farmer ought to snap out of his dream world of high prices."

"It solves nothing merely to treat the farmer scornfully because he cannot manage forces beyond his control," Butler said. "It solves nothing to deny that Mr. Eisenhower promised 'full parity' to the farmers in 1952. The farmers know full well that he did."

Butler said that through tariffs, tax relief, and "plain giveaways, the President has extended lavish help to his big business friends."

Butler said that "something must soon be done to rescue the American farmer from financial ruin." He said neither the President nor Benson seems to have any new plan "to deal with this deteriorating situation" so it is "up to Democrats to step into the breach."

He said experience shows that "farm bankruptcy ultimately threatens the whole economy."

Kerr Calls It Recession.

In Washington yesterday, Senator Robert S. Kerr (Dem., Oklahoma), said he did not believe the Republicans could run successfully in 1956 on a "prosperity" platform so long as farmers are operating in what he called a recession.

"Even Secretary of Agriculture Benson now recognizes there is a farm recession," Kerr said in an interview before leaving today for Oklahoma.

Benson has said he is not satisfied with farm prices and that specific recommendations for supplementing the present farm program will be submitted to Congress.

But he added yesterday: "I think agriculture is fundamentally sound. I think we are going to see some improvement in farm prices as we get a better balance between production and consumption in this country."

He said on the NBC television show "Youth Wants to Know" that public opinion polls indicate "most farmers feel their income this year will be as good if not a little better than last year."

Ready for Fight.

Benson said he is "perfectly willing that part of the battle in the next election be out in the farm belt."

"I feel very strongly that the whole farm problem is so important that it should never be manipulated to serve partisan political purposes," he said.

The secretary said that although he is not satisfied with farm prices "I think there has been great stability in the last couple of years, particularly in consumers' prices."

Vice President Nixon said in a speech at the national plowing contest in Wash., Ind., Saturday that "there is no farm depression in the United States."

Kerr said that if Nixon doesn't believe there is a farm recession "he ought to try to operate a business where income is down 35 per cent and expenses are up 25 per cent."

Johnson Critical.

Other critical comment came from Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson, who said in Austin, Tex., that while farm prices are dropping the farm mortgage debt is still on the increase.

"This is a perfect illustration of what happens under the sliding scale of parity—prices slide down while mortgages slide up," he said in a statement.

"Farm prices have been Bensonized to a point where about the only profitable crops consist of the mortgages held by the money lenders."

Acreage Rental Plan to Boost Farm Prices Urged.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—A Republican congressman urged the Eisenhower administration today to spend $300,000,000 on an acreage rental plan to bolster farm income in the crucial 1956 election year.

Representative H. Carl Andersen (Rep.), Minnesota, made the request in a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson.

Andersen proposed that the Government pay at least $10 an acre to farmers who voluntarily take land out of production to help prevent surpluses. The goal would be 30,000,000 idle acres.

House Republican whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, also mentioned the possibility of an acreage rental plan in a statement issued yesterday. He said some such program "is worthy of consideration and may be one of the things considered after Congress reconvenes" next January.

SYRIAN SOURCES CLAIM TURKEY IS MINING BORDER

DAMASCUS, Sept. 19 (UP)—Turkish authorities have planted mines at some points along the Turkish-Syrian border as a "precautionary measure against smuggling," Syrian interior ministry sources said today.

The sources expressed concern over the alleged move "because such measures never take place between neighboring countries except in a state of war."

PERON DECIDES TO QUIT, OFFICIAL RADIO ASSERTS

the Argentine people are against him. He can still spare from destruction our beloved city of Buenos Aires."

Argentine political exiles in this city across the river from Buenos Aires were confident that this was the end of the Peron regime. Some of them insisted Peron had resigned even before making the cease-fire offer.

Before Lucero's broadcast of Peron's decision to step down, the rebels claimed the revolt had spread to four provinces and bolstered their threat to shell Buenos Aires by bombarding Mar del Plata, resort city south of the capital. Surrender of Mar del Plata was claimed.

Earlier, a rebel broadcast claimed the Second Army command had joined the revolt.

Army's Shift Confirmed.

Gen. Luis Alberto Lagos, commander of the Second Army, confirmed that it had gone over to the rebels in a telephone call placed to his Mendoza headquarters by the United Press in Santiago, Chile.

He said he had decided to take his troops into the revolutionary camp because of "the patriotic spirit of the officers and non-commissioned officers."

Lagos said that in the sequence of events since the start of the revolution last Friday some units of the Second Army had been ordered to march on Cordoba to engage the rebels there in battle. Those units were under the command of Gen. Jose M. Sosa-Molina, brother of Peron's minister of defense, Gen. Humberto Sosa-Molina.

But at San Luis, he said, he called a meeting of the officers and urged them to revolt against Peron.

"They agreed," Lagos said, "and Sosa-Molina and the other high officers fled."

Second Army garrisons in Mendoza, San Juan and San Luis provinces normally total some 20,000 officers and men.

Lagos said he immediately began receiving pledges of support from several Army and Air Force units and that "all they were waiting for was for someone to take the initiative."

He said the governors of the three provinces surrendered to him and that, while they were under arrest, they were being "treated like gentlemen."

He said that three bombers from bases still loyal to Peron had flown into the Mercedes base and joined the rebels.

By the Associated Press.

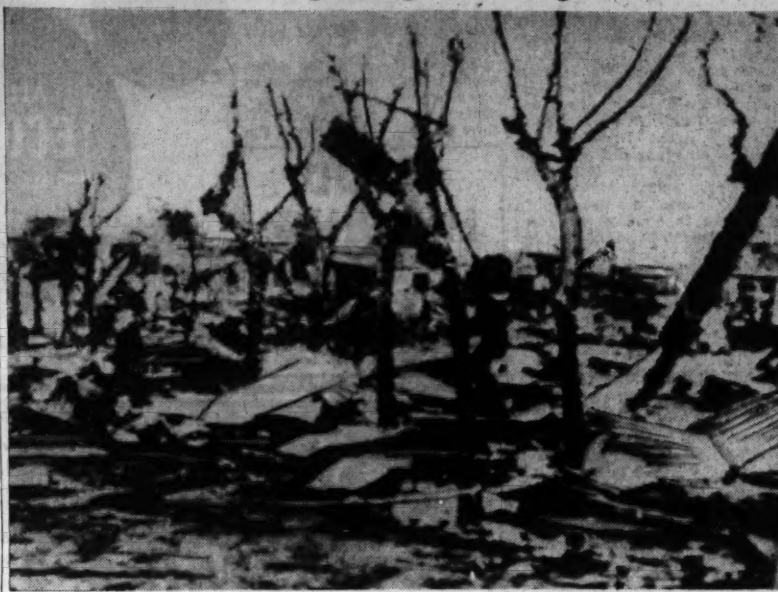

The rebel station at Puerto Belgrano declared that Mar del Plata had surrendered to rebel forces through the Uruguayan consul.

The broadcast from the fleet said Mar del Plata had been shelled by the cruiser Nirio de Julio, the former United States cruiser Boise, bought by Argentina four years ago. A short wave broadcast said fighting began in the streets of the city, which has a population of 100,000.

Prior to these developments, the government had announced it was attacking the rebel stronghold of Puerto Belgrano.

A broadcast, claiming to come from the provincial capital, the City of Mendoza, said anti-Peron forces also were in control of the neighboring provinces of San Juan and San Luis.

The Government said an uprising in Tucuman was put down by loyalist forces but gave no indication of the size of opposition strength. Tucuman, some 700 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, is the capital of Tucuman province. There had been no previous reports of revolt there.

Rebels Cut Pipeline.

Rebel forces in the vicinity of Bahia Blanca, a big port near Puerto Belgrano, cut the gas pipeline to Buenos Aires from oilfields in southern Argentina. The Government said it was widely used for industrial as well as household purposes in coal-short Argentina.

Support for Peron was voiced in Buenos Aires by the men and women's Peronista party and the Secretary General of the General Confederation of Labor (CGT).

Alejandro Leloir, head of the Peronista party, said in a radio speech the party is "firmly at the side of its leader."

The CGT called on its 6,000,000 members throughout the country to rise in defense of Peron. The labor group, which has formed one major base of the President's support, had offered prior to the revolt to serve as a civil militia in seething Argentina.

Warning of Strikes.

A front-page editorial in the pro-government newspaper La Epoca warned of possible strikes and sabotage if the rebel forces should win.

The editorial said the CGT would be persecuted if the revolution succeeded and that it would be logical for it to defend itself with strikes and related actions.

"A resistance group would be formed," the newspaper said, "and it would blow up highways and factories. Destruction and death would be sown all over the nation."

In another editorial, La Epoca said "this seditious movement... is paid with dollars."

perhaps pounds, perhaps lire."

The government for the second time announced last night that it held Cordoba, provincial capital of 350,000 persons in north central Argentina. It admitted, however, that the "insurrectionist command still maintains some centers of resistance."

Pro-Peron forces first claimed they were in control of Cordoba Saturday. The government radio, explaining why fighting there had not ended as previously announced, said later loyalist forces took their time because they "did not want to aggravate the suffering of the civilian population."

Rebel broadcasts derided the government claims.

Buenos Aires went through its second consecutive night blackened out under the threat of rebel bombardment. The Government ridiculed the insurgent threats, asserting the capital should be considered an open city.

The rebels said the capital could not be considered an open city because it was defended by troops loyal to Peron and artillery.

Telephone communication with Argentina was disrupted yesterday afternoon and correspondents in Buenos Aires were permitted to send out only government communiques and other official information.

Meanwhile, 280 Argentine naval cadets were landed in Montevideo by the rebel Argentine fleet. The cadets, who range in age from 11 to 16, were evacuated from their school near Rio Santiago last Friday by a rebel landing craft in a battle for the Rio Santiago naval base.

Twenty-two Argentine exiles, mostly former army officers who backed the 1951 rebellion against President Peron, were arrested by Uruguayan border guards as they sought to enter Brazil for a crossing of the narrow Uruguay river into Argentina. Spokesmen told of their plans to join the current rebel forces.

Uruguay, a haven for some 500 exiles from Argentina, insists they abide by its neutrality rules.

TEXT OF PERON'S ANNOUNCEMENT ON RESIGNATION

ful to the country's permanent interests.

I, who love the people profoundly, am suffering a deep wound in my soul for their fight and their martyrdom.

I should not wish to die without having made a last effort for their peace, their tranquility and their happiness.

If my spirit as a fighter impels me to the fight, my patriotism and my love for the people induce me toward every personal resignation.

In the face of threatened bombardments of the invaluable wealth of the nation and its innocent people I think nobody can fail to put aside his other interests and his passions.

I believe blindly that this should be my conduct.

I am not afraid to follow that road.

History will say if I was right in doing this.

Juan Peron.

HOTEL WORKERS WARNED OF RISK IN MIAMI JOBS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—The AFL Hotel Workers' union warned its 420,000 members yesterday that seeking work in the Miami (Fla.) area this winter would be "risky" because of the labor dispute there.

The union said it plans to expand its "strike" against resort hotels at Miami Beach and Miami and extend it into the big winter tourist season.

The union has been enjoined by Florida courts from picketing 21 of 22 big resort hotels which the union has declared "unfair." Last month the National Labor Relations board refused to intervene in the union's demands that it be recognized as bargaining agent for the hotel workers in the area.

WORTMAN AID SOUGHT IN PISTOL SEIZURE OF AUTO

as a result of the attempt on his life last May. The pistol shot, which occurred shortly after he left the Terrace Lounge where he had been drinking, struck him below the right eye and in the shoulder.

Police went to the Terrace Lounge Saturday night and last night looking for DeMartino, but were told he was "out of town." Since he and Mueller both are reported to live in St. Louis, police here were asked to arrest them.

The license for the automobile taken at pistol point was issued in the name of a woman with an address of 6444 Mississippi avenue, on the eastern outskirts of East St. Louis. Authorities found no such address.

The 6400 block of Missouri is principally vacant land. However, the liquor license of an East Side night club, near Cahokia Downs Race Track, was issued to an applicant who gave the address of 6444 Mississippi avenue, records of the St. Clair county clerk's office showed.

The Post-Dispatch disclosed last month that operations of a gambling syndicate headed by Wortman have been transferred from Club Prevue on Collinsville road in Madison county to a night club near the race track. The actual site of the club is not far from the 6400 block of Missouri.

Raided Over Weekend.

County authorities raided the club over the weekend, but found no evidence of gambling. Police said they were puzzled over the strong-arm methods used to take the car from England's garage, since it could have been recovered lawfully by paying a $9 fine at the police station and $5 for towing charges.

Two theories were advanced: The automobile was "hot"—underworld parlance meaning it was involved in some sort of criminal activity—or the men who took it were "just showing off" after drinking.

Riley said the five men appeared completely sober to him. England, a St. Clair county deputy sheriff, said: "I guess they wanted that car real bad."

Commissioner Beebe declared the men who took the machine "showed a complete, and flagrant disregard of the law."

He promised that "no stone will be left unturned" to find the guilty persons.

Calls Police Meeting.

Beebe called a meeting of East St. Louis police officials today to discuss the handling of the investigation. Attending were Police Chief George Dowling, Detective Chief Al Bott, Inspector Virgil Baltezer, Lt. Raymond Bischoff, Capt. Frankie Polk and eight detectives.

The departmental order that hoodlums should be kept out of East St. Louis was stressed by Beebe, who said the police should not relax in their campaign of harassment of such individuals until they leave.

Mueller and Havey were told by East St. Louis police "to get out and stay out" after the shooting incidents. The two men disappeared after the shootings, taking Havey's private plane, and were gone for almost a month.

The body of J. Fred Koenig, their associate in the racing news enterprise, was found in the trunk of his automobile June 22.

DE PAUL SOCIETY SPEAKER TRACES FIGHT AGAINST REDS

The same opposing forces now represented by materialistic Communism and Christian democracy were operating when the St. Vincent de Paul Society was established in France more than a century ago, Lawrence Pellegrino, board member of the society said yesterday.

Addressing members of the organization at its general meeting at St. Teresa's Catholic Church, Pellegrino declared that a small group of young men, led by Frederic Ozanam, the society's founder, were able within a short time through dedication to charitable endeavors to influence Europe in favor of Christian democracy.

Prior to the meeting, Auxiliary Bishop Charles H. Helmsing spoke to the society members at a mass marking the end of the organization's annual retreat. St. Teresa's Church is at Grand boulevard and North Market street.

WORKHOUSE CHIEF UNDAUNTED AFTER 'RISK' BACKFIRES

In spite of a setback last week, Warden Harold E. Baynes of the City Workhouse today remained steadfast in his policy of trying to help deserving inmates get jobs on completion of their sentences.

A youth St. Louis manufacturer was so impressed with the warden's plea for another chance for deserving inmates that he not only agreed to hire one inmate but paid the remaining $30 of his $78 fine.

The freed prisoner had no place to sleep so the manufacturer let him stay in the plant his first night out of the Workhouse. Next morning the manufacturer gave the man a dollar for breakfast. The man left for breakfast and at 2 p.m. showed up "stinking drunk," Baynes said.

"It's a calculated risk," Baynes said, "but I'm going to keep plugging on this. Some of these people will stay out of trouble if they're given another chance."

DELEGATES VOICE OPTIMISM OVER NEW U.N. SESSION

Assembly Opens Tomorrow—Quick Test on Red China's Claim to Seat Expected.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. 19 (AP)—United Nations delegates gathered for the Tenth General Assembly are optimistic about the 12-week session opening tomorrow. They are losing no time in getting down to discussions of strategy on controversial problems.

The delegates expected a quick test on Red China's claim to a U.N. seat, and a bitter fight between Soviet-supported Poland and the American-backed Philippines for a Security Council seat. A Polish victory would mark the first time a Soviet bloc candidate has been elected in six years.

United States chief delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., said in a television interview that he was always an optimist and hoped the Russians would adopt President Eisenhower's "open sky plan" to avert surprise attack by exchanging aerial reconnaissance and defense blueprints of each other's country.

Discounts Red Smiles. He also said he did not put too much stock in Russian smiles and cordial attitudes. He said the United States had enough support in the Assembly to sidetrack again Red China's plea for a U.N. seat and would oppose any move for relaxation now of a U.N. embargo on strategic materials for Red China, two propositions Russia is expected to press.

Francis O. Wilcox, Assistant Secretary of State who deals with U.N. affairs, told a U.N. boosters' organization, the American Association for the United Nations, that the United States sincerely trusts that the Soviet Union will join the international atomic agency to be set up by United States-bilateral pacts.

Mohammed Ali, new Pakistan ambassador to the United States and head of his country's delegation, said the session may solve problems that have been causing world tension. V. K. Krishna Menon, India's roving ambassador, said he hoped for the continuance of the "better present atmosphere" in world affairs.

Hammarhjold's Views. But U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold, in another television interview, said he did not expect a break in the jam on membership applications, held up mainly by Russian vetoes. He added that disarmament plans which did not include Red China and the rest of the world outside the U.N. would not have any sense.

Observers here familiar with Russian tactics said Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov's first trip to a U.N. Assembly working session since 1946 means that he has concrete plans behind the Moscow summit.

One strong belief here as well as in world capitals was that the Soviet delegate would cite his Government's promise to return a naval base to Finland only a few miles from Russian soil and would demand that the United States move its troops 3000 miles and more back from its foreign bases.

The United States delegation was to hold its first caucus today, look at the program, and discuss committee assignments. The Latin American delegations also planned to caucus on last minute business and then meet with Lodge to go over mutual problems.

Disarmament Talks. The U.N. Disarmament Commission subcommittee returned to regular sessions after a weekend recess during which Harold E. Stassen, the United States delegate, conferred in Denver with President Eisenhower. Stassen arranged a morning meeting with his Western counterparts before the late afternoon session with the Russians.

The African-Asian bloc planned another meeting for a look at the France-Morocco-Algeria situation before the Assembly opening.

The first clash over Red China's seating is expected to come while Dr. J. M. A. H. Luns, The Netherlands Foreign Minister, is acting as president. Then the Assembly will elect Jose Maza, of Chile, president for the session.

United States Secretary of State Dulles will lead off the opening policy debate, probably Wednesday afternoon. Molotov is to speak next week.

CATHOLIC GROUPS DEMAND EQUAL SCHOOL BUS SERVICE

A resolution calling for equal school bus service for public, private and parochial students in Missouri was passed yesterday at the joint convention of the Catholic Union of Missouri and the National Catholic Women's Union, Missouri branch, at St. Charles.

The 165 persons attending the three-day convention, which ends today, heard Edward R. O'Connor, a political scientist, declare that until weaknesses in state governments and constitutions are eliminated, more and more power will be centralized in the Federal Government.

Herman J. Kohnen, 6994 Chippewa street, was elected president of the Catholic Union of Missouri, succeeding Edwin F. Debrecht of O'Fallon.

PRESIDENT CAN'T VOTE, RESIDENCE TIME TOO SHORT

DENVER, Sept. 19 (UP)—The summer white house said yesterday that President Eisenhower could not vote in a local election at his new Gettysburg (Pa.) home in November even if he had registered in time.

Assistant White House press secretary Murray Snyder said Pennsylvania law requires one year of residence for eligibility to vote. The President and Mrs. Eisenhower did not establish residence at Gettysburg until last spring.

Snyder made the statement in response to news stories from Gettysburg noting that the final date for voting registration passed Saturday without the Eisenhowers having registered.

The Eisenhowers formerly voted in New York City where they had established residence.

STATE DEPARTMENT TALKS TO EMBASSY IN ARGENTINA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—The State Department said today it had talked to the United States Embassy in Buenos Aires at 10:45 this morning; the Argentine capital was quiet then, and there were no reports of injury to United States citizens.

The telephone conversation was the first after a 24-hour break in telephone communications. The department received some cables during the telephone break.

Department spokesman Lincoln White declined comment on the military situation. About 3000 Americans live in Argentina. About 2500 of them are in or near Buenos Aires.

$87,491 TAX AND INTEREST BILL SETTLED FOR $10,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Service has accepted a compromise offer of $10,000 from Walter and Vera Hallbauer of Teaneck, N.J., in settlement of income tax deficiencies and interest totaling $87,491 for the years 1946 and 1947.

The service said the offer, which includes an agreement to pay a percentage of any income above $8000 for the years 1948 through 1950, is in excess of the amount that could be realized through forced sale of the taxpayers' assets.

Walter Hallbauer, the service said, is president and general manager of the Jersey Lace, Inc., which has shown operating losses in recent years due to depressed conditions in the textile industry.

'WOLF WHISTLE' MURDER TRIAL OPENS IN SOUTH

Two Charged in Negro Boy's Killing—State Will Not Ask for Death Penalty.

SUMNER, Miss., Sept. 19. (AP)—Two white men accused of the "wolf whistle" murder of a 14-year-old Chicago Negro boy went on trial here today.

An overflow crowd pushed into the little courtroom, and more waited outside when the doors were closed. Deputy sheriffs searched spectators for weapons as they walked single-file into the courtroom.

District Attorney Gerald Chatham said he would not ask for the death penalty for Roy Bryant, 24-year-old grocer, and his half-brother, J. W. Milam, 35, "since a substantial part of the state's evidence is circumstantial."

The white men were accused of murdering Emmett Louis Till, a husky Negro lad who stuttered and is alleged to have "wolf-whistled" at Bryant's wife in Money, Miss.

"I'm not going to give them (prospective jurors) a chance to disqualify themselves because they don't believe in a death sentence," Chatham said.

As a crowded segregated audience watched, the state tentatively accepted 11 jurors before noon.

Chatham asked each prospective juror if race would influence his verdict if chosen. Each replied that it would not.

No Negroes will serve on the jury. Only qualified voters can serve on juries, and Tallahatchie county has no registered Negro voters. Women do not serve on Mississippi juries.

The trial comes in the race-conscious, agricultural delta where Negroes outnumber white persons as much as four to one.

Sumner residents seem to resent the national publicity given their town since events leading to the crime began in neighboring Leflore county. The trial is held in Sumner because Till's body was pulled from the muddy Tallahatchie river, one-quarter of a mile inside Tallahatchie county.

The largest collection of newspaper men to cover a Mississippi story in recent years poured into the dusty town of 550 population. They came from New York, Detroit, Chicago, Atlanta and other cities.

Till's uncle, sharecropper Mose Wright, told reporters yesterday that five minutes time might have prevented the killing. Till almost missed the train in Chicago for the vacation trip to Mississippi.

Versions of Crime. According to all versions, two white men roused him from bed about 2:30 a.m. Aug. 28 because of his alleged wolf whistle at Mrs. Bryant.

The men — Wright claims there were three, including one who stood in the background — put the boy in their car and drove away. His body was found in the river three days later — at least most officers believe it was his body.

Sheriff H. C. Strider doubts that it was, and defense attorneys said they will concentrate much of their fire against identification of the body.

Wright said again yesterday he is positive it was Till. The boy's mother, Mrs. Mamie Bradley of Chicago, said she is positive "beyond the shadow of a doubt."

Defense Attorney Sidney Carlton said his five-man team also will attack Wright's claim that he can identify two of the three men who took the boy away.

The 64-year-old Negro sharecropper said he can positively identify one of the defendants and believes he recognizes the other.

Wright's finger-pointing "will be watered down considerably on cross-examination," Carlton said.

Officers said Bryant and Milam admitted taking Till from the sharecropper's run-down home, but said they released him unharmed when Mrs. Bryant said he was not the boy who whistled at her.

Mrs. Bradley stopped off in Cleveland on her way down to the trial and told 2000 people attending a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People fund-and-membership-raising drive:

"I realize my son is a martyr, and I want to work and help so that his death will not have been meaningless."

She urged the group to write their Congressmen about her son's death and to promote N.A.A.C.P. membership.

ABDUCTED, BEATEN, ROBBED ON EAST SIDE, MAN REPORTS

Gerhardt E. Pittman, 110 Sunset avenue, Collinsville, told East St. Louis police he was abducted, beaten and robbed of $40 and his automobile keys early yesterday in East St. Louis.

Pittman reported four men accosted him at First street and St. Clair avenues. One of the men placed a knife against his neck and forced him into an automobile, he related. About two hours later he was thrown out into an alley, near Cook avenue, he said.

His own machine, which he had parked near the spot where he was accosted, was missing on his return.

MISSING BRITISH DIPLOMATS ARE 'PRESUMED' SPIES

while they were students at Cambridge. "The most astonishing fact," Petrov added, "is that the two men did not know of each other's spying activities until they were almost ready for their flight to Moscow."

Burgess was on leave from the British Embassy in Washington and MacLean was head of the Foreign Office's American department when they vanished together in May 1951. They were traced only as far as France.

Petrov said the two now are working in Moscow, but a Foreign Office statement repeated previous Government assertions that "we have no direct evidence they are in Moscow."

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express declared that "even now much remains to be revealed" and demanded editorially: "Why, for example, has the public been kept in the dark? To protect some high official from punishment for his omissions? If so, whom?"

Petrov wrote that a Soviet agent who worked in the Russian Embassy in London told him Burgess brought him "brief cases full of Foreign Office documents" in 1943. The agent said the documents were photographed and returned.

Petrov gave no details of MacLean's espionage activities, but said the "regularly supplied the Kremlin with all the information they could lay their hands on." He said they appealed to the Soviets for asylum after learning they were being investigated by British security agents.

Conceding that the two men were under investigation when they fled, a Foreign Office spokesman said: "There was insufficient evidence to warrant MacLean's arrest. Nor were there powers to stop either of them leaving the country."

The Soviet government has never admitted having any information about the two Britons.

MacLean's American-born wife and their three children disappeared from Switzerland two years after he vanished. They presumably joined him.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS FATAL TO-16 IN STATE IN 54 HOURS

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 19 (AP)—Fifteen persons died on Missouri's streets and highways over the weekend, bringing the total for last week to 21.

State highway patrol records showed today that the toll for the 54-hour weekend period was three more than during a Labor day weekend that was 24 hours longer.

The latest tragedies brought the statewide toll for 1955 to 679, or 22 more than for the same period in 1954. September appeared to be the big killer month since the death toll so far this month is 62, compared with 48 for the same weeks in September last year.

Last weekend's bloody record was increased sharply by a collision between a Fire Truck and a tractor-trailer before dawn Sunday in St. Louis. Four firemen were killed.

U.S. INDORSES INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC AGENCY

Hopes Russia Joins It—Statute Drawn Up and Early Adoption Is Predicted.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—The United States expects that an international atomic energy agency, linked to the United Nations, will be set up soon and hopes that Russia will support it.

This word came yesterday from Assistant Secretary of State Francis O. Wilcox, addressing the American Association for the United Nations. He said that a statute providing for establishment of the agency has been drafted by Great Britain, the United States, France, Canada, South Africa, Portugal, Australia and Belgium. These countries all have atomic energy establishments or produce the raw materials for atomic fuels.

Wilcox, making his first speech as an assistant secretary, said that the draft would be polished on the basis of comments and criticisms made by other members of the U.N. and added:

"We expect and hope that this new agency will be established soon. We shall then be ready to take the next steps in exploring this new world of nuclear energy. . . . The agency can at once foster the development of national programs and the continued interchange of information on peaceful uses which was so effectively begun at Geneva (in the atomic conference last month)."

Wilcox said the proposed organization also could encourage "world-wide research in peaceful uses of the atom and 'arrange for the allocation of nuclear materials' so that more and more scientists could gain experience in the field."

"Those countries most advanced in nuclear science must, in particular, give support to the work of the new agency," Wilcox said. "The United States, as we have demonstrated, is prepared to do so. . . . We sincerely trust that the Soviet Union likewise will contribute its great resources of skill and knowledge so that the new agency when established will be international in every respect."

Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin announced to President Eisenhower at the Geneva Big Four meeting in July that Russia would contribute to an agency for peaceful uses of atomic energy when it was set up.

3 Sardinians Killed in Ambush. NUORO, Sardinia, Sept. 19 (AP)—Three prominent citizens of bandit-ridden central Sardinia were killed last night in an ambush. Authorities, faced with the fear-imposed silence which greets all inquiries into banditry here, said they had no clues to the crime. The dead were the director of the civic market, the director of a transportation firm, and the secretary of the nearby town of Oliena.

MALTA REQUESTS FULL UNION WITH UNITED KINGDOM

LONDON, Sept. 18 (UP)—Representatives from the Mediterranean island of Malta sat down with British politicians today to discuss Britain's strangest colonial problem.

The tiny crown colony island, 2300 sea miles from England, wants to join the United Kingdom—England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

The movement is led by Dom Debono, 31, a local politician.

Dom Debono, 31, a local politician, is the leader of the movement.

Mintoff, Laborite premier, who once threatened to haul down the Union Jack and raise the Stars and Stripes if Britain did not listen to his demands.

If he gets his way the Maltese will pay British income taxes, receive benefits such as free medical treatment and other health benefits and send members to parliament.

Mintoff led a delegation here two months ago. Today's conference was the outcome of that visit.

Britain's three political parties and Maltese leaders sat down in the House of Lords.

under chairmanship of Lord Chancellor Viscount Kilmer to debate what Prime Minister Eden called "this imaginative proposal."

Russia Formally Gives Up Base, Extends Amity Pact With Finns

Zhukov Suggests U.S. Follow Soviet Example and Yield Military Holdings Overseas.

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 (UP) — Russia officially surrendered control of its Porkkala naval base in Finland today—a move that led to a Soviet suggestion that the United States give up its overseas bases.

The Russians also signed a 20-year treaty with Finland, pledging friendship and mutual aid.

The non-Communist Finns had leased Porkkala to the Russians for 50 years under the Soviet-Finnish peace treaty of 1948. The Soviets agreed today to hand it back within three months.

The mutual aid pact signed today is an extension of the 1948 10-year treaty which was not due to expire until April 1958.

Soviet Premier Bulganin signed for Russia. Premier Kekkonen and Defense Minister Emil Skog signed for Finland.

Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev, who was in the Soviet delegation at the signing, declared at the end of the ceremony:

"In liquidating our military base, we create a much better base for our friendship—a base for peace in the world."

The 20-year extension of the treaty of friendship was considered to be a significant Soviet diplomatic victory by foreign observers here.

Russia agreed Saturday to turn over Porkkala. This action led to the suggestion by Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, the Soviet Defense Minister, at a reception at the Finnish embassy last night that the United States give up its foreign bases.

Marshall Zhukov, a friend of President Eisenhower, explained the Soviet decision on Porkkala by saying, "We decided the time has come to liquidate our bases in general. The sooner others decide to follow our example the better it will be in our opinion for peace in general."

Asked what other bases he referred to, Zhukov replied, "We have in mind the bases of other countries, American ones for example, around the Soviet Union, China and other countries."

"Talk about peace must be strengthened by actions and that is what we are doing," he said. There were reliable reports Finland would grant diplomatic recognition both to east and west Germany after this conference.

Russians Leaving Porkkala; Finns Hear Explosions. HELSINKI, Finland, Sept. 19 (UP) — Heavily loaded Soviet barges and transport ships sailed from the Porkkala naval base yesterday evacuating equipment and supplies following the Russian promise to give the base back to Finland.

Residents of the border area heard loud explosions at the base Saturday night. Finnish coast guard sources said the Russians apparently were blowing up fortifications and underground installations built during their 11-year occupation of the base.

Tugboats pulled long strings of barges away from Porkkala yesterday toward Tallin in Russia-run Estonia and the other side of the Gulf of Finland.

The railway which links Porkkala with Leningrad was busy with long trains loaded with military equipment and troops headed back to Russia.

Clouds of smoke from many fires rose over the port, indicating the Russians were burning things they did not want to take home but also didn't want to leave to the Finns.

Walker with a knife, Carter said. The watchman ordered Shields to halt but the latter backed away and started to run.

Carter said he fired two shots in the air and then fired at the robber, who fell. The money, two $5 bills and ten $1 bills, was recovered from Shields.

A total of $1171 was stolen from a safe in the kitchen of the Supreme Lodge, Order of the White Rabbit, 2906 Ohio avenue, Edward Dillon, lodge president, reported to police today. The burglary occurred over the weekend, he said.

The burglars, who also took lodge records and building keys, gained entry by forcing the kitchen door. They knocked the combination off the safe, police reported.

Clarence Workes, a salesman, 3503A Cook avenue, was robbed of a wallet containing $118 early today behind St. Alphonsus Rock Catholic Church, 1122 North Grand boulevard, as he was going to mass, he told police.

Workes said two Negroes grabbed him from behind, and one brandished a knife. They fled on foot.

captured Saturday night by a licensed watchman who interrupted a holdup in which the victim was savagely beaten and robbed of $20.

Henry Walker, 64-year-old Negro merchant, is in Homer G. Phillips Hospital with a fractured left arm and multiple contusions suffered when he was knocked down, beaten and kicked by the robber in an area-way beside the victim's home, 2636 Franklin avenue.

Also in the hospital is a 20-year-old former Workhouse inmate booked as Wiley Shields, 3700 block of Cottage avenue. Shields, a Negro, was shot in the left thigh.

Jardee Carter, a watchman, said he entered the area-way to check the doors of several business houses and found Shields standing over Walker, who was kneeling on the ground moaning. Shields was threaten-

VERDICT OF ACCIDENT IN FRASER KILLING

Victim's Husband Weeps at Inquest—Neighbor Testifies.

A verdict of accident was returned today by a coroner's jury following an inquest in the death of Mrs. William C. Fraser, shot early Saturday by her husband, who said he mistook her for a burglar.

Fraser, charged with manslaughter in a temporary warrant issued by the circuit attorney, wept when asked to give his name at the inquest and was assisted from the hearing room.

Miss Norma Moss, who lives next door to the Fraser apartment in a duplex dwelling at 5943 Victoria avenue, testified that she spent Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. Fraser, watching television. She said she went to bed about 1 a.m. Saturday and was awakened two hours later by Fraser's shouts, "Call an ambulance! I've shot my wife." In reply to a question, Miss Moss said the Frasers "got along well."

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Mon., Sept. 19, 1955

Mrs. Viola McKay of What Cheer, Ia., mother of Mrs. Fraser, told the jury she received a letter last week from her daughter, who seemed to be in excellent spirits. Police testified that when they reached the home, Fraser was outside holding a shotgun. He was hysterical, the officers said, but later told them his wife had awakened him, saying there was a prowler in the yard.

He said he obtained his shotgun from a kitchen closet, and on returning to the bedroom saw a form at the window. Fraser said he fired, the charge striking his wife, Mrs. Fraser, 24 years old, was the mother of two children.

G.O.P. TO SALUTE PRESIDENT JAN. 20 WITH 100 DINNERS

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The Republican National Committee last night announced plans for 100 or more "salute to Eisenhower" dinners Jan. 20, which President Eisenhower is expected to address over a nationwide closed-circuit television network.

Ostensibly conceived as a method of launching the party's 1956 campaign fund raising program, no one doubts that the dinners will turn out to be a gigantic "draft like" movement.

Party leaders think Jan. 20, the third anniversary of the President's inauguration, may be too early to expect him to take the occasion for definite announcement of his intentions as to running for a second term. They feel that he is likely to withhold that announcement until February or March.

Nevertheless, the program obviously offers the hopeful party leaders throughout the country a chance to provide a mass demonstration of nationwide pressure on the President to stand for re-election.

M'ARTHUR SAID TO HAVE MADE $1,040,000 DEAL

He and Gen. Whitney Silent on Report
They Sold Mining
Stock in Manila.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney said yesterday there would be no comment from either him or Gen. Douglas MacArthur on a Manila report that they had just sold $1,040,000 worth of shares in Consolidated Mines, Inc.

A Manila newspaper, quoting "unimpeachable sources," said the sale of holdings Saturday caused the heaviest trading ever recorded by the Manila Stock Exchange. The stock was reportedly purchased by a group of 40 buyers headed by former Senator Vicente Madrigal. Exchange officials confirmed the transaction but declined to name the sellers.

Consolidated Mines is reported to ship 80 per cent of the Philippines' total chrome exports to the United States.

HURRICANE IONE HITS N. CAROLINA, SWEEPS INLAND

radio reports indicated damage there was not too serious.

Havelock, N.C., a residential area housing many families of men stationed at the Cherry Point marine air base, was cut off from the west by high water and the town of Aurora was being evacuated by amphibious planes.

Telephone lines were down to dozens of eastern North Carolina communities. New Bern lost its power.

Crops—mostly peanuts, cotton, tobacco and corn—were heavily damaged.

Two big portable gasoline generators supplied power at two hospitals at Washington, N.C. The civil air patrol dispatched about 30 generators to other towns for possible emergency use.

Towns Isolated.
Reports picked up by amateur radio operators said New Bern and Beaufort were isolated by high water. City officials were quoted as saying New Bern was laboring under the worst flood conditions in 20 years. Amphibious ducks from Camp Lejeune were trying to reach Beaufort and set up radio equipment.

Tides up to 8 and 10 feet above normal were forecast near the storm center to the north and east and as much as three to five feet above normal in some sections well in advance of the hurricane.

The fear of floods equaled that of wind and tides through the East and Northeast where rampaging rivers took more than 200 lives and caused untold damage after August's hurricane Diane—with winds diminished almost to a breeze—dumped torrents of rain on Pennsylvania, New York and New England.

Forty-three had died a week earlier when Connie crashed ashore over the Carolinas and moved northward to Pennsylvania and New York where water also caused the greatest loss.

HILDA HITS MEXICO, BLOWING SELF OUT
BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 19 (AP)—Hurricane Hilda was dying out today in the rugged Sierra Madre mountains of Mexico and storm jitters eased in the Rio Grande valley of Texas.

Hard, local rains were predicted along the Rio Grande as far north as the Del Rio-Eagle Pass area tonight and tomorrow and the state disaster relief office was on an alert for possible floods. It was in the Del Rio-Laredo area last year that a backlash from hurricane Alice caused a devastating flood in which scores died. An accurate count of the death toll has never been made.

How much damage Hilda did to the already flooded oil port of Tampico was not fully known. Communication were knocked out.

MISSOURI DEMOCRATS ASKED FOR $35,000

With Party Leaders
Here.

Democrats in Missouri will be asked to raise $35,000 this year for the party's national committee.

Mark R. Holloran, Democratic national committeeman from Missouri, told reporters he believes that more than $35,000 will be obtained at the Jefferson-Jackson dinner to be held late in October or early in November. Any excess funds will go to state and local Democratic organizations.

Money contributed to the national committee this year will be used as advance campaign funds for next year's presidential election, Holloran pointed out.

McCloskey and his assistant, William D. Teedy of Philadelphia, arrived in St. Louis last night on their way east after a trip to the West Coast. McCloskey stopped at Independence, Mo., yesterday to visit former President Harry S. Truman.

The national treasurer conferred with Holloran and a group of Democratic leaders this morning at Hotel Jefferson. McCloskey also is meeting with labor representatives to discuss plans for raising funds for the 1956 campaign.

DULLES WARNS TURKEY, GREECE TO END QUARREL

He Says U.S. Aid Depends on Partnership of Countries Now at Odds Over Cyprus.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles made a dramatic appeal to the Prime Ministers of Greece and Turkey yesterday to patch up their quarrel over Cyprus "without delay."

He said American aid to both countries is dependent on their "partnership."

In personal messages to the two Prime Ministers, Dulles said:

"I have followed with concern the dangerous deterioration of Greek-Turkish relations caused by the Cyprus question."

"Regardless of the causes of this disagreement which are complex and numerous, I believe that the unity of the North Atlantic community which is the basis of our common security, must be restored without delay."

Identical Wording.

The messages were sent to Prime Ministers Alexander Papagos of Greece and Adnan Menderes of Turkey. Their wording was identical except that Dulles used the phrase "Turkish-Greek relations in the message to Menderes and "Greek-Turkish" in the one to Papagos.

Dulles's initiative, taken one day after he returned from a two weeks vacation, apparently was an effort to persuade Greece not to throw the Cyprus issue into the United Nations.

It also presumably was designed to get both countries to co-operate with a British plan to give home rule to the 500,000 people of Cyprus, now a British Crown colony.

Greece wants to take over the island whose inhabitants are Greek-speaking in the proportion of four to one. Turkey wants to continue British rule in the interests of the Turkish-speaking minority.

Rioting in Istanbul and Izmir on Sept. 6 marked a British-sponsored conference with the two countries in London which collapsed in disagreement.

They Hold Strategic Sector. Dulles based his appeal on the fact that Greece and Turkey are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and hold a strategic sector of the line against Communism in the Middle East.

Dulles emphasize this point and went on to say that since 1947 the United States has "made very considerable efforts" to help Greece and Turkey to protect their freedom from Soviet power and build up their living standards.

"We have extended this assistance," Dulles said pointedly, "and extend it now—because we believe that the partnership of (Greece and Turkey) constitutes a strong bulwark of the free world in a critical area."

"If that bulwark should be materially weakened, the consequences could be grave indeed. I urge you therefore to make every effort to assure that the effectiveness of your partnership is not impaired by present disagreements."

Dulles did not in any sense flatly threaten to halt United States aid running into hundreds of millions of dollars to either country. What he conveyed by implication, associates suggested, was that a real breakdown of the Turkish-Greek partnership would destroy the basis of the United States aid policy and force a review in which both countries might find themselves at great disadvantage.

STRIKERS DENY KROGER CHARGE OF 'HIDDEN AIM'

Want Clarification of Statement They Would Bar Sale of Certain Products.

Representatives of AFL maintenance men whose strike has resulted in closing the 52 Kroger Co. food stores in the city and St. Louis county, said today they would ask management to clarify a statement that a "hidden objective" of the strikers is to compel the company to discontinue the sale of certain products.

The statement was made by R. A. Hughes, local Kroger manager, in a letter to newspapers and radio stations. A copy of the letter was sent to Edward J. Weber, business representative of Local 6, AFL Firemen, Oilers & Maintenance Men.

Weber, who said the strike was in support of a demand by the 28 maintenance men employed by Kroger Co. for a wage increase of 50 cents an hour, declared he had no knowledge of a "hidden objective."

In reply to a statement by Hughes that pickets were being paid by another union, Weber said the pickets who are paid receive their compensation from his union. Others are the strikers themselves, Weber added.

United States conciliators were seeking to arrange another conference of company and union representatives later today, in an effort to effect a settlement of the dispute.

The previous wage contract, providing for $2.25 an hour for maintenance men, expired May 31. In negotiations the company offered an increase of 10 cents an hour plus fringe agreements. The offer was rejected by the union, which authorized a strike.

In addition to causing the closing of the 52 St. Louis-area stores, the strike is interrupting deliveries to 86 Kroger stores in other sections of Missouri and in Illinois. Members of other unions, including truck drivers, have refused to cross the strikers' picket lines.

SOVIET AMNESTY LINKED TO OTHER POLICY CHANGES

fute West's Charges
That Smiles Don't Match Deeds.

By MARGUERITE HIGGINS
The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch
Special Radio

MOSCOW, Sept. 19 — A sweeping Russian amnesty announced yesterday for Russians who collaborated with the Nazis is intended as another important step in the developing Soviet post-Geneva policy as well as a demonstration of the increasing sense of internal security felt by Russian leadership, say diplomats here.

The amnesty adds to the growing list of Russia's internal and external preparations for the forthcoming foreign ministers' conference at Geneva, which is intended to continue negotiations begun earlier this summer by the chiefs of state. As Communist party Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev clearly indicated Saturday night at a Kremlin banquet, Russia will take the position at Geneva that the recent series of governmental actions — including announcement of armament cuts — refute Western charges that Soviet smiles are not matched by deeds.

Display of Confidence.
The amnesty is as firm a demonstration of confidence by the Soviet leaders in the population as anything that was happened in the recent past.

If Russia's top leaders were worried about a potential revolt among the people, they would not be prepared to release many thousands of persons already have shown themselves suspect by collaborating with a one-time enemy.

Yesterday's announcement in Leningrad said that one reason the Russians decided to grant amnesty at this time was because the state of war between Russia and Germany had come to an end.

The amnesty provides for immediate release of minor collaborators, for reduction of sentences of major wartime collaborators and for "immediate liberation from places of confinement, regardless of the length of the period of punishment, or persons convicted for serving in the German army or police or special German units."

A particularly significant part of the amnesty was its provision to free from responsibility "those Soviet citizens who are at present abroad, who during the war occupied leading posts in police organizations set up by the Germans or those who were involved in anti-Soviet organizations in the post-war period."

Can Be Forgiven.
According to the published law, Russians mentioned as participating in the anti-Soviet organizations will be forgiven if they "have washed off their guilt by subsequent patriotic activities in favor of their homeland."

These parts of the amnesty are aimed at the hundreds of thousands of Soviet citizens who after the war chose exile rather than return to their homeland.

In a case where a Soviet returnee is proved to have committed severe crimes against the Soviet Union, courts can take action. But under the new law punishment may not exceed more than five years of exile. The final clause of the amnesty decree, which was signed by Klementi Voroshilov, president of the Council of the Supreme Soviet, declares that the council is "empowered to take measures for easing the return to the Soviet Union of those citizens who are abroad, as well as members of their families."

The law provides that those returning will be given employment in the Soviet Union, as will any member of their family desiring a job.

In other words, a Russian married to an American woman could, according to this law, bring his family back to the country and be sure of a livelihood for himself and his family.

Air Force Adopts Tough Policy With Aircraft Manufacturers

New Contracts Will Penalize Companies
Whose Planes Don't Measure Up to Promised Performance.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—The Air Force has adopted a tough new policy to tighten the reins on profits of airplane manufacturers and crack down on production of faulty military aircraft, Aviation Week Magazine says.

The trade journal disclosed in its current issue that a new type of contract has been introduced by the Air Materiel Command, which handles Air Force procurement. It will levy penalties on manufacturers whose planes fail to perform as promised or whose deliveries are late.

The magazine said that under the new contract there will "be no more profit made on bad products" or on "modification to fix the faults of aeronautical lemons, if the blame must rest on the contractor."

Up to now, there has been no firm provision in contracts that planes must measure up to promised performance, the magazine said. It quoted the Air Force's buying agents at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, O., as saying that from now on a producer's profit margin will be tied to his guarantee. He will pay a penalty if he falls short.

Many aircraft among the new breed of supersonic planes have fallen short of expectations as industry and Government wrestled with the tough problems in-involved in jumping up to speeds of 750 to 1000 miles an hour. Aviation Week said the new air policy will be to push greater competition among companies, more fixed price contracts and more emphasis on using private finances for development of new products.

POLICE DROP AX ON 3 AMATEUR LUMBERJACKS
 Still full of energy after a wiener roast, three young men decided to test their ability with an ax early yesterday along River Des Peres drive, between Loughborough and Gravois avenues. They were good enough to feel a large tree, which damaged a street light when it toppled. As the amateur lumberjacks worked, however, they were seen by a man who thought police might be interested.

Police were, and a short while later arrested three men in their early 20s, who identified themselves as Leo J. Sobczak, laborer, 5900 block of Floy avenue; Fred A. Frishman, tile setter, 3000 block of New Ashland place, and Edward J. Gunner, laborer, 3200 block of North Twenty-third street. They said they had been drinking and admitted the tree chopping, police reported. The wood cutters will have an opportunity to repeat their story Oct. 3 in Police Court, where they are scheduled to appear on charges of destroying city property.

 Lieutenant Simms, a laborer of the 2600 block of Delmar boulevard, surrendered to police last night as he was being sought in connection with the fatal shooting of one man yesterday and the wounding of the victim's brother. Dead was Sherman Barnes, 29, of 2633 Delmar boulevard. He died at Homer G. Phillips Hospital after being found wounded in a building in the 2600 block of Delmar boulevard. Police found his brother, William, at his home, 2842 Franklin avenue, wounded in the chest. All the men are Negroes. William Barnes told police that his brother and a woman were arguing with another man in the building where his brother's body was found. Simms was booked suspected of homicide and of assault with intent to kill.

LA SALLE, Ill., Sept. 19 (AP)—President Eisenhower personally ordered "a rotten deal" in the defunct Dixon-Yates power contract, says Stephen A. Mitchell, former Democratic national chairman. Mitchell said yesterday in a speech to a La Salle county Democratic picnic: "This was a rotten deal when the President personally ordered it in June of 1954. It violated fundamental rules of good government. And it was a rotten deal when he was forced by public opinion to come galloping in from a golf course to cancel it." Mitchell, mentioned frequently as a possibility for the Illinois 1956 Democratic gubernatorial nomination, set off his party's criticism of the Administration's handling of the power contract last August. The government had planned to subsidize the proposed construction of a big power generating plant at West Memphis, Ark., to supply Memphis's electricity needs and to be owned by the private Dixon-Yates utility group. The plan was later dropped. Puts Cost at $100 Million. Mitchell charged then, in a debate with Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall, that if given go-ahead, would have cost taxpayers more than $100,000,000. "The plain record now shows the corruption of governmental processes at the White House level, and President Eisenhower can no longer deny it."

At the President's vacation headquarters in Denver, Murray Snyder, assistant White House press secretary, said there would be no comment on Mitchell's speech. Mitchell attacked the role in the Dixon-Yates planning of Adolph E. Wenzell, vice president of the First Boston Corp., New York, who served as a Government adviser. "Wenzell worked for the Government from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and for a New York financial institution from 5 p.m. to 9 a.m. It was, perhaps, just a coincidence that both of his bosses were interested in the same deal—Dixon-Yates." Mitchell asserted that at one time, President Eisenhower said Wenzell had nothing to do with the Dixon-Yates plan, but Wenzell's own testimony disclosed his participation in it. He said Wenzell's name was deleted from the chronology of Dixon-Yates negotiations when it was made public by the Government. Cost of Cancellation. After terming the contract a "rotten deal," Mitchell said, "It doesn't make it any sweeter to realize that before a year goes by it may cost the United States Government as much as $5,000,000 in cancellation charges." The Chicago Democratic leader took a swat at what he termed the use of modern day "medicine men" who, he said, produced a "cornball" to divert attention from the disclosures which led to the resignation of Air Force Secretary Talbott. He said the "cornball" was announcement of the proposed launching of a satellite to circle the earth in upper space. Mitchell reaffirmed his support for Adlai Stevenson, the former Illinois Governor and the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee who, he said, "is the predominant choice of Democrats all over the country to be the Democratic nominee again in 1956."

Morse Says People Are Being Plundered.
 WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (UP)—Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, charged today that the American people "are being plundered of their property" by the natural resources policies of the Eisenhower Administration. Morse said these policies are the handiwork of the Department of the Interior, the Budget Bureau and the Federal Power Commission, but have been "ratified" by President Eisenhower. Morse made his charge against the Administration in a statement prepared for the Senate Reclamation and Anti-Monopoly subcommittees. The subcommittees, under the leadership of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, are scheduled to open joint hearings tomorrow on the power policies of the Administration. The subcommittees are inquiring particularly into the "power partnership" program of the Administration. They plan to go into the Administration's approval of private development of the Hell's canyon on the Snake river in Idaho and Oregon; Interior Department policies on the power preference clause at federal hydro-electric plants, and the proposed merger of the Puget Sound Light & Power Co. and the Washington Power Co. in Washington state.

U.S. JET HITS JAPANESE HOMES; PILOT, 4 OTHERS DIE
 TOKYO, Sept. 19 (UP)—A United States Air Force jet plane crashed into a group of Japanese houses 25 miles north of here today, killing the pilot and touching off fires that burned four Japanese to death. The Air Force said the plane was on a "test flight" when the cause of the crash "is unknown." It said an investigation was under way. The name of the pilot was withheld pending notification of his family.

FORRESTAL TRIALS LIKELY TO AWAIT PASSING OF STORM

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Sept. 19 (UP)—Officials were expected today to postpone speed trials for the supercarrier Forrestal rather than risk having the ship buffeted by hurricane force winds.

Previous tests were delayed for two weeks in August when hurricane Connie raked the east coast. The shipyard is scheduled to deliver the 60,000-ton warship to the Navy Sept. 29. It is to be commissioned into the fleet Oct. 1.

In Great Lakes, Ill., Saturday night, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas said the Forrestal is capable of shifting its attack position nearly 1000 miles in a day.

The big ship, which can accommodate medium bombers and guided missiles, is capable of prolonged speed of "40 miles per hour," he told the Ninth District Navy League banquet.

SINGAPORE, Sept. 19 (UP)—Ong Ah Too, Chinese truck driver, was found guilty today of participating in the mob murder of United Press correspondent Gene Symonds and was sentenced to death by hanging.

S. Supplah, an unemployed Indian youth accused with Ong, was found not guilty of the murder charges.

The prosecution charged that Ong and Supplah helped beat Symonds to death the night of May 12 when he was covering city-wide riots that followed a bus strike. Symonds died in a hospital of a fractured skull.

Several witnesses testified they had seen the two men actually strike Symonds. Both men denied the charges and Ong said he was at home with his ailing wife that night.

Goh Ah Pong, one of the two crown witnesses who positively identified Ong as one of the assailants, told the court his life had been threatened because of his testimony. Police furnished him a body guard.

The other crown witness, Seet Bag Cheng, testified he left a coffee shop with Goh the night of the Communist-led riots and later came upon Symonds as he was being attacked. He said the two accused struck the American newsman repeatedly as he lay helpless on the ground.

Seet said Symonds broke away once but the crowd chased him and continued to hit him until he fell the last time.

Defense counsel attacked the credibility of the prosecution's main witness, Goh, as a "self-confessed gangster" and an unreliable character during the final summation earlier today.

Counsel J. D. Donnelly, a British lawyer, told the court he would like to see the guilty persons hanged, but he warned the court against convicting "an innocent person on the evidence of a self-confessed gangster."

MAN LYING ON TRACKS KILLED BY FREIGHT TRAIN

A. G. Williams, 735A Converse avenue, East St. Louis, was killed early yesterday when struck by a train between Fifth and Sixth streets on the Southern Railroad tracks, East St. Louis. A Negro, he was 41 years old.

R. D. Eddings, engineer of the Terminal Railroad freight train that struck him, told police Williams was lying on the center of the tracks and that it was impossible to stop the train in time to avoid striking him. At first, Eddings said, he failed to recognize the obstruction as a man.

Williams died in St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

WESTERN ALLIES OPEN TALKS ON DEAL FOR RUSSIA

Confer in Washington on How to Persuade Reds to Permit German Unification.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Top diplomatic officials said today that any European security treaty proposal which the United States supports must include Germany as a full and active member.

Agreement on the scope and other provisions of a security pact will be sought among the United States, Britain, France and West Germany in talks beginning here today.

These secret talks are aimed at working out a package deal by which Western leaders will hope to persuade the Soviet Union to agree to German unification on Western terms.

The Western talks will spread over a period of several weeks and up to the time that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay meet with Russia's V. M. Molotov at Geneva on Oct. 27.

Dulles returned to his desk Saturday after two weeks of vacation. He began intensive planning of Western strategy for the forthcoming Geneva foreign ministers' conference which is expected to produce hard bargaining on Germany and other European problems despite the soft talk exchanged by President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Bulganin at the Big Four summit sessions last July.

The United States has been developing a variety of proposals for dealing with the German and European security problems in the hope that the combination of pressures (such as Russia's presumed need for trade with the West) and inducements (such as new security guarantees in Europe) can change Russia's attitude on unification.

The present Soviet policy is that the time is not ripe for merging East and West Germany and won't be until Germany can definitely be broken away from the Western alliance. In effect, Russia appears ready to stand on the present division of Europe indefinitely. That probably explains as much as any one factor can the Soviet readiness to establish diplomatic relations with the West German Government after years of denouncing it.

Dulles believes that any deal with which the West seeks to encourage Russia's interest in unifying Germany will have to include at least three items:
1. A security treaty to assure Russia against any new German aggression. Dulles is known to believe that the principals in the treaty must be the United States, Britain, Russia, France and a new unified Germany.

The United States, informants said, will not agree to any such pact unless German unification is a part of the deal.

2. A guarantee by the Western powers that East Germany would not be used as the place for NATO's "forward strategy." Dulles thinks the Soviets would never agree to give up East Germany without some such assurance.

3. Limited disarmament in Europe. Dulles, believing the Soviet government is interested in reducing the arms burden in Europe, thinks that this may prove to be one of the practical results of the prospective Big Four negotiations. However, he believes it should be brought about in connection with German unification—a condition with which Britain disagrees.

Britain believes the plan of limited disarmament, coupled with a demilitarized zone along the Iron Curtain in Europe, could be made a pilot experiment for global disarmament.

17,000 G.M. WORKERS STRIKE AT FIVE PLANTS IN CANADA

TORONTO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Seventeen thousand workers in five General Motors plants in Ontario went on strike today after their union rejected a company package offering them a layoff pay plan.

The CIO United Automobile Workers said the best offer in the negotiations preceding the strike left G.M. workers far behind employees of the company's chief Canadian competitors. The company offered a 17.6-cent-an-hour package, including 5 cents for the layoff pay plan and an across-the-board pay increase of 5 cents. The average hourly wage for production workers now is $1.64 and for nonproduction workers about $1.46.

The strike call closed the 10,000-man Oshawa plant, the Frigidaire plant in the Scarborough suburb of Toronto, the London Diesel locomotive plant, the Windsor engine plant and the parts and foundry operations of the company in St. Catharines.

digging machine when the collapse occurred. A fellow-worker, Martin Lammert, 5949 Tara avenue, was first to see Biggs's plight. He yelled for help and went to the victim's assistance as 20 other workers rushed up. Robert C. Conley, head of the construction firm installing the sewer, said he first removed dirt from around Biggs's face. The unconscious man was uncovered in about 10 minutes. Meanwhile, the Normandy Fire Department and Northwoods Police Department sent equipment, and artificial respiration was administered as Biggs lay in the ditch, but without success. He was pronounced dead at Normandy Osteopathic Hospital of asphyxiation and shock. He had suffered also a crushed chest, punctured lung and broken neck.

Undercover Attacks on UNESCO
Planned, Planted, Nurtured by Old Hand at Hate RacketeeringAmerican Legion Report Disclosed W.
Henry MacFarland Jr. Was Back of Propaganda Drive — He Organized
Nationalist Action League.

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

IF THE AMERICAN LEGION is right in clearing UNESCO of all charges of subversion and related accusations—and the evidence is, I think, conclusive—it is important to find out how this massive smear of UNESCO got started.

Was this a spontaneous upsurge of doubt and questioning about what the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization was doing, and fear that it was doing harm?

Was there a simultaneous outbreak of criticism in different parts of the country or was this attack traceable to a specific source which undertook it for some less-than-visible purpose?

If the attack was ulterior, where did it come from and what manner of person was behind it?

These are proper questions and important ones, if the many Americans and numerous worthy American organizations who are temporarily misled by purposeful propaganda are to be better prepared to fend off such purposeful propaganda.

One Group Involved. Fortunately the American Legion committee, headed by Ray Murphy, past national commander of the Legion, and five other veteran Legionnaires, went deeply into these very questions and found that this attack on UNESCO was planned, planted, nurtured and brought to full fruition by one organization, headed by one man whose background uncovers his purposes.

The Legion committee traced the flood of anti-UNESCO charges to its source. Its report says:

"Running clearly through all the lines of charges and the volumes of testimony against UNESCO, and as clearly through the mass of giveaway material spread across the nation by various groups and individuals, is a thread that leads back to 876 Granite street, Philadelphia, the office of the American Flag Committee and the home of its guiding genius, W. Henry MacFarland Jr. That is where American Flag Committee letter No. 13 came into being. With it, Mr. MacFarland has been able to mislead a great many Americans and some American Legionnaires."

Did Not Testify. The report adds that "it is significant that with full opportunity to appear at the many public hearings in Washington, so conveniently near to Philadelphia, the author of letter No. 13 did not appear to testify."

In order to identify the author of letter No. 13 and to grasp something of his animosity, the Legion committee cites first some conclusions made public in 1954 by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in its report entitled "Preliminary report on neo-Fascist and hate groups."

Here the House Committee on Un-American Activities identifies the National Renaissance party as "openly Fascist" and describes the semi-monthly paper, Common Sense, as employing and carrying the writings "of a number of individuals associated with the National Renaissance party" and as serving "as a clearing-house for hate propagandists throughout the country."

It adds that "among these are many of the native Fascists and hate racketeers who were active in the 1930's."

Author of Attacks. At this point the Committee on Un-American Activities identifies the prime author of the crusade against UNESCO and the primary source of all subsequent attacks in UNESCO. It states:

"W. Henry MacFarland Jr. is another individual who has been simultaneously active in both the National Renaissance party and Common Sense. A resident of Philadelphia, MacFarland in 1948 had organized a Nationalist Action League which was promptly cited as a Fascist organization by the United States Attorney General. In 1949 MacFarland spoke at a number of meetings of the National Renaissance party in New York. He presided at a branch meeting of the NRP held in Philadelphia in October, 1949. Meanwhile, his name also appeared as 'associate editor' of Common Sense in the issues which appeared during July and August of 1949."

The American Legion committee report adds this note of its own:

"The American Flag Committee was organized in August of 1950 for the stated purpose of taking specific action against widespread efforts to expand the power of the United Nations. It is hardly more or less than the successor to Mr. MacFarland's Nationalist Action League, a title MacFarland abandoned after the league was designated as 'Fascist' by the Attorney General of the United States."

This is a valuable and revealing story and it is useful to have it come from such respected sponsorship.

1863 Protest Against Curtailed
Civil Rights Inspires Hennings

By DREW PEARSON

(Copyright, 1955.)

WASHINGTON.

ON the office wall of Senator Tom Hennings of Missouri hangs a lithograph which helped inspire the investigation of the Bill of Rights that Hennings has begun. The lithograph is a copy of George C. Bingham's famous Civil War protest against the imposition of loyalty tests at Kansas City, Mo., by Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing of the Union Army on Aug. 25, 1863. It shows the people of Kansas City rising up against Gen. Ewing's suppression of civil liberties.

Gen. Ewing's crackdown required a loyalty test and a loyalty certificate to be carried by those permitted to move about in Kansas and Missouri. "All those receiving loyalty certificates will be permitted to remove to any military station in this district," Gen. Ewing ordered. "All others shall remove out of this district."

Senator Hennings has had this lithograph over his mantelpiece ever since he has been in the Senate.

Dedicated to Friends of Liberty. "The artist who painted it," explains Hennings, "dedicated it to the friends of civil liberties, and the general who issued the order later had it come back to haunt him when he ran for Congress from Ohio. It almost defeated him."

"I have been concerned over the erosion of some of our rights guaranteed by the first ten amendments. It seems to me that some of them have been whittled away and that the American people are not so alert as they might be in guarding their rights. That is the reason for the investigation."

The Hennings hearings will be resumed on Oct. 3 to hear witnesses on freedom of religious worship, guaranteed in the first amendment; and on Oct. 17, free speech, also guaranteed in the first amendment. Hennings has picked an able Republican attorney from St. Louis, Lon Hocker, as counsel for the investigation.

Says.

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON.

AN official report has been presented to the National Security Council, indicating that the Soviet Union is now overtaking the United States in the air-atomic weapons race.

As of now, by this report's estimate, the frequently mentioned "American Lead" may be expected to become a Soviet lead in the period 1962-1965. The basis of this estimate is the expectation that in 1960-1965, the Russians will enjoy a decided superiority in inter-continental ballistic missiles. These are the multiple-staged rockets that will be able to carry nuclear warheads, at speeds of many thousands of miles an hour through the upper air, from Russian launching sites to American targets.

The report to the National Security Council also includes recommendations for reversing this unfavorable trend in the Soviet-American balance of power. But these recommendations will be difficult, if not impossible, to implement without upsetting the Administration's present budgetary and fiscal plans.

Such are the essential results of the most important high-level study of the relative strength curves of Soviet and American armed forces that has yet been attempted. The study was made by a committee, headed by Dr. James R. Killian Jr., president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The committee, which included leaders of science and industry, was set up by the National Security Council by direction of President Eisenhower, after the second American H-bomb explosion at Eniwetok in the spring of 1954.

Some of Group's Members. Technically, the Killian committee was a subcommittee of the President's Scientific Advisory Committee, on which Dr. Killian serves under the chairmanship of Dr. Lee A. DuBridge, president of the California Institute of Technology.

Besides Dr. Killian and Dr. DuBridge, among those who served on the subcommittee were Dr. Norris E. Bradbury, director of the Los Alamos scientific laboratory; Dr. Charles Lauritsen, professor of physics at California Institute of Technology; Dr. I. I. Rabi, professor of physics at Columbia University and chief scientific adviser to the Atomic Energy Commission; Dr. Jerrold Zacharias, director of the M.I.T. laboratory of nuclear science; Dr. Jerome B. executive vice-president of Bell Telephone Laboratories; Bruce S. Gild, of Arthur D. Little, Inc.; Robert C. Sprague, president of the Sprague Electric Co.; and Charles A. Thomas, president of Monsanto Chemical Co.

These are only a few of the members of the committee. In addition, other experts were employed as consultants, so that a total of about 50 of the most highly qualified men in this country joined in the Killian committee's work.

Access to All Information. The committee had complete access to all information available to the American Government. It labored for many months, twice receiving extensions of the deadline that the National Security Council had set for its report.

In the end, more than two months ago, the committee laid before the President a unanimous report. It was transmitted by President Eisenhower to the National Security Council, which then passed it on to a narrowly restricted circle of policy-makers in the State Department, the armed services and the Central Intelligence Agency. The policy-maker's comments and recommendations must now be returned to the N.S.C., where the Issues raised by the Killian report will presumably be debated and decided when the President returns to Washington.

Three Conclusive Factors. Such is the background of this disturbing document. Three factors are known to have led the Killian committee to the somewhat bleak conclusions set forth above.

The first, which is almost old hat by now, is the continuous build-up of the Soviet atomic and hydrogen bomb stockpile. Although by no means so great as the American stockpile, the Soviet arsenal of nuclear weapons is still becoming great enough to be decisive. With both giant powers enjoying relative nuclear plenty, the most important measure of the balance between them, becomes the capability of delivering the weapons, rather than the number of weapons.

The second factor, which was confirmed by the Moscow over- flights last spring, is the massive Soviet production of long- and medium-range jet bombers and night and day jet fighters.

The Russian strategic air force is being rapidly re-equipped with "Bisons" and "Badgers," which are the new Russian B-52-like and B-47-like bombers. This process is continually improving the Soviet capability of striking at American targets and of neutralizing the overseas bases on which our own Strategic Air Command so largely depends. By the same token, the rapid re-equipment of the Soviet air defense command with the new Russian day and night fighters, the "Farmer" and the "Flashlight," is proportionately reducing the American Strategic Air Command's capability of striking at Russian targets.

Most Important Factor. Finally, the third and most important factor that influenced the Killian report is the presumed Soviet progress in guided missile development. As has been pointed out before, the Soviet guided missile effort has been organized on a Manhattan District pattern, with a comparable priority, ever since the end of World War II.

In America, the Eisenhower Administration has stepped up outlays on missile develop-

Eisenhower Has Widest Lead
He Ever Held Over Stevenson

Survey Shows Voters Now Prefer President 59 Pct. to 37 Pct.—Former Illinois Governor Slips in Party.

(Copyright, 1955.)

PRINCETON, N.J., Sept. 19.

IF ADLAI E. STEVENSON were running for President against Dwight D. Eisenhower, voters questioned in a survey say they would vote today as follows:

Eisenhower — 59%
Stevenson — 37%
Undecided — 4%

This is the widest lead recorded for the President over his 1952 opponent in a series of "trial heats" which have been conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion over the last 18 months.

Following is the vote in the 1952 election and the trend of the vote of those with opinions in polls since April 1954:

1952 election — 55% 45%
April 1954 survey — 55 45
September — 53 47
February 1955 — 59 41
June — — 59 41
TODAY — — 61 39

Three out of four Independents expressing an opinion today pick Mr. Eisenhower.

Stevenson continues to run far ahead as the man Democratic voters would most like to see as their presidential candidate in 1956. The former Illinois Governor is named the favorite by 55 per cent of those expressing a preference for the Democratic party in the latest poll.

In second place is Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee. He is followed by Gov. Averell Harriman of New York and Senator Richard Russell of Georgia who are tied for third. Close on their heels is Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Today's figure on Stevenson's chances represents a drop of 6 points since a survey in June when 61 per cent of all Democratic voters questioned named Stevenson as their choice.

Stevenson — 38%
Kefauver — 24%
Rayburn — 6%
Harriman — 6%
Lausche — 4%
Williams — 4%
Others — 8%
None of these, — 10

Among Democrats, Kefauver leads in all sections of the country as the favorite nominee if Stevenson bows out, as follows:

EAST: Kefauver, Harriman, Rayburn, Sparkman and Symington.

MIDWEST: Kefauver, Williams, Harriman, Lausche and Rayburn.

SOUTH: Kefauver, Russell, Rayburn, Harriman and Sparkman.

FAR WEST: Kefauver, Harriman, Rayburn, Williams and Sparkman.

and very important successes have already been achieved with the shorter range missiles. Yet even today the American guided missile effort is essentially organized on a business-as-usual basis.

It is not excluded that the United States will have an intercontinental missile by 1960. The Air Force's Atlas project, for a true intercontinental missile, or the Navajo project, for a long-range ramjet missile, may well have produced a prototype by that date.

But after reviewing all the evidence concerning present development curves, the members of the Killian committee concluded that we should expect the Russians to enjoy an important predominance in intercontinental guided missiles from 1960 to 1965.

The committee's judgment, in short, is a judgment of relative strength, and not a judgment of absolute strength. It is nonetheless significant for all that, as is shown by the committee's reported analysis of what may be called the phases of the Soviet-American power balance.

The first phase, which is definitely stated to be past, was the phase of unchallenged American superiority in strategic air power and atomic bombs. In this phase, the American bargaining position was greatly superior to the Soviet bargaining position in all international dealings.

The second phase, in which we now find ourselves, is a transitional phase. For the present, although the United States has long ago lost anything like unchallenged superiority, this country still has the edge in strength and, therefore, still possesses some remaining

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the public welfare; never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to stick wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Dog of the Week

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
We are sorry that the children of Reader H. Hazellhurst were so disappointed because they were not awarded "Laddie," whose picture appeared as the Post-Dispatch Dog of the Week Sept. 12.

"Laddie" proved to be one of the most popular dogs ever pictured in this feature. Hundreds of applicants came, saw Laddie, admired him, and wished to adopt him.

Obviously, all but one of these applicants were due for disappointment. This happens each time an attractive dog is pictured. Choosing the right applicant presents quite a problem.

Taking the first applicant would be unfair to those who receive the Post-Dispatch later. To award the dog to the one who can wield the greatest pressure would be unthinkable. To be fair to all, the eligible applicants (St. Bernards don't fit in efficiencies, nervous dogs are not for small children) are selected and from those eligible ones, the winner is chosen by lot.

We are very grateful to the Post-Dispatch for this feature each Monday. The Dog of the Week picture has been responsible for finding homes for literally hundreds of animals, sheltered at the Humane Society. Not only is a home found for the pet pictured, but many who come to see the Dog of the Week are attracted to some other appealing dog or cat and another "guest" of the shelter does its best to brighten the life of a family.

I am sure that if Reader Hazellhurst will bring his children to the Humane Society Shelter, the youngsters will find a substitute which will soon drive all thoughts of Laddie out of their minds.

FRITZ K. GROLOCK,
President, Humane Society of Missouri.

Heartache

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Anyone condemning Mr. Russell for abandoning his son, doesn't know what it is all about.

I have a son 8 years old (also named Bobby) and it takes my husband and me both to cope with the situation.

Anyone taking care of a mentally retarded child, who even knows what heartache is. A man alone with a child like this certainly deserves a lot of credit and not a year in jail and a $1000 fine.

Mr. Russell has no money but would probably be glad to serve a year in jail just to know that his son is well taken care of.

MRS. J. L. D.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
When I saw the picture of the Russell boy in the paper, I felt sure he was a retarded child, and my heart went out to him; so alone, so helpless.

The next day when I read the father's story, my heart went out to him, too, a man with a living to make and no one to care for his little boy.

I understand how this father felt, for I am the mother of a retarded child. My little boy is past school age, but he has no school to go to, even though he needs special training more urgently than normal children need schooling; and even though I pay taxes that are supposed to supply tuition for my children.

I am glad that this story was printed; it has helped to make people more aware of the plight of those of us who have the problem of retardation in our families.

I love my little boy dearly, and will always care for him to the best of my ability, and will try to give him proper guidance and training. I hope that he will some day be able to make himself useful. But I ask myself, "What will happen to him when I am not?"

It is not a pleasant thought. Something should be done for our retarded children.

Up in Arms

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The recent articles regarding the Moline Creek stench are timely indeed. However, Bellefontaine Neighbors is now voicing its indignation.

We, too, have residents who are having their homes harmed by this awful stench originating from the creek.

Our city is unique in that it is properly sewered, and has a 60-inch trunk line that is sufficient in size to accommodate the Moline flow. Yet we here in Bellefontaine Neighbors with complete sewerage and far-sightedness of a trunk line sewer to accommodate the watershed have to be subjected to this serious and acute health problem created by other communities.

People indeed are up in arms, and are rightfully so.

W. E. MUEHLBERG JR.,
Mayor, Bellefontaine Neighbors.

A Driver's Tale of Woe

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I saw "Woman Drivers" letter Sept. 7 and not only agree with her but say she hasn't seen anything yet. Forget about the sexes; just drive a car anywhere across the city and you'll see drivers I call "pelther fish nor fowl"—they don't drive in a lane plainly marked with heavy lines—they straddle them. You can't pass right or left.

Why don't the police prow the streets and weed out these income-poop drivers? It's a miracle more accidents don't happen.

On the Scrap Heap

A great part of the labor force of this country which should be one of our chief productive assets is threatening to become a liability.

That is the part that consists of older workers, people who are unable to obtain employment because of age alone.

Among men, it comprises those over 45; among women, those as young as 30. This group has come to compose nearly a third of our entire labor force as medical science lengthens the life span.

President Eisenhower declared and reiterated recently that "this waste of valuable skills must be eliminated." Secretary of Labor Mitchell has warned that if the older worker is forced to remain idle the rest of the country may have to bear higher taxes in order to support him in idleness. It may also have to accept a lower standard of living.

At the same time these older persons if continuously denied a chance to work will eventually "fuse into the most potent political bloc this nation has known, capable of bringing strong pressure on Congress for relief measures that would place an excessive burden on the taxpayer," the Secretary warned.

So the country has both the apple and the stick as incentive to solve the problem of the older workers. And much can be done.

In particular more facts need to be known about the older worker's efficiency, adaptability, safety and reliability; employers are strongly influenced when such facts can be shown to them, but the known facts so far are too meager.

Private pension plans often stand in the way of employment of older workers because the employee's equity cannot be carried from one job to another. Counseling, training, retraining and community-wide efforts to put older workers to work are demonstrably effective.

The Federal Government started doing something about it five years ago during the Truman Administration, with a pilot study by the Labor Department of the problem in five localities. More recently the Eisenhower Administration has obtained a special fund from Congress with which to make a more comprehensive attack upon the problem.

At the same time, 19 states, Illinois among them, but not Missouri, have created commissions or other groups to study the special employment problems of older people.

All the "bits and pieces" of study made so far "seem to indicate that a really first-class study probably would show that the older worker is good business, but we do not have anything we can hand to the employer that really convinces him of that," says Labor Under Secretary Larson. Meantime, the waste of manpower and womanpower in many of its potentially most useful years goes on.

But while the older worker may pound the pavement in vain this year, there is a growing hope for the years to come. There is hope of a working society in which a worker is selected for a job, in Secretary Mitchell's words, "on the basis of ability and qualifications, regardless of age or sex."

How Did It Happen?

The community can only be shocked and grieved by the horrible crash of the fire truck and mail tractor-trailer that has cost the lives of four firemen, including a veteran of 34 years of service who would have retired Oct. 2. The consequences are grave enough that the most careful investigation must be conducted to find out exactly what happened and why. The facts will do nothing to restore the heavy loss, but they can and should be used to guard against another tragedy of this sort.

When Davy Was Really Tough

Davy Crockett's appeal to the juvenile trade, it turns out, is anything but new. And we mean Davy Crockett, the bear-killer, not the hero of the Alamo who, of course, has been in the history books for a long time. Evidence to this effect comes from the editors of America who have turned up Vol. 5, No. 108 of Beadle's Half-Dime Library. Dated Oct. 10, 1879, its 16 pages are given over to "Daring Davy, the Young Bear-Killer; or the Trail of the Border Wolf."

Although Davy himself does no more than strike one evil-doer "into a state of somnolency," the story holds its own fairly well with the modern "comic" for violence and death. For example: Barbara Warner plots the kidnapping of Davy's sweetheart, Rosebud, and moves down a few men with her trusty derring-doe before squaring accounts by dying to save Rosebud.

But if the action is beyond modern criticism, we cannot help wondering with the editors of America about the 1879 story's language. In view of all we hear about reading problems, what would today's youngsters make of that "state of somnolency," not to mention darkness "as black as that mythical river, the Styx, over which Charon waits to ferry departing souls," or the news that "Davy's act had caused this tremendous denouement."

Denouement. Why that word might be fatal in one of today's $64,000 spelling bees.

Failing Mark at Sullivan

That 17-year-old high school girl at Sullivan, Mo., may have been difficult to deal with. She may have been unco-operative. There may have been other differences besides her objection to a compulsory student activity fee. But surely the adult school authorities and the Franklin County Prosecuting Attorney could have found some better way to cope with her than to let her spend two nights and part of three days in jail. It makes you wonder what the same authorities would do if they came up against a really serious problem. Jail is the place for some people but not high school girls.

A Case of Red Duplicity

A story of Russian espionage and subversion under cover of diplomacy is presented in documented detail in the report of the Australian Royal Commission which began a 10-month investigation after the defection of Vladimir Petrov, third secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Canberra, on April 3, 1954. Less spectacular in its disclosures than a similar Canadian report in the case of Ivor Gouzenko almost a decade earlier, it nevertheless falls into the same pattern.

Such activities abroad, as well as utter secrecy about activities within the Kremlin and most of the rest of Russia, have been the chief cause of Western mistrust of the Communist dictatorship. And this could never be allayed by the argument that all governments, not only the Russian, carry on secret intelligence operations. Such activities by Westerners have been almost exclusively defensive. They have sought to keep governments informed of possibly hostile developments; they were not conducted to undermine other regimes.

As the new leaders in the Kremlin seek easier relations with other governments, the revelations in a Petrov or a Gouzenko case are their greatest handicap. They may profess to have abandoned such methods. But in view of the record, prudence makes it impossible to accept such professions at face value. If Bulganin and his associates are sincere, they must realize that their own predecessors have done more than anybody else to handicap them in getting acceptance for a change of mind and of policy.

It will take time and many specific examples of good will to draw away the curtain of justified suspicion. And for this Russians are to blame.

What Senator George Proposed

Red China has recently released seven of 22 American civilians it had promised to return home immediately. When Peiping has fully complied with its pledges on this score, our State Department would be wise to consider very seriously Red China's request that the ambassadorial conferences which brought about agreement on detained civilians should be raised to a higher level of negotiation.

The current Geneva meeting of ambassadors was announced by the State Department last July shortly after Democratic Senator Walter George, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had publicly urged high-level conferences with the Chinese Communists.

Senator George at that time expressed surprise that the Geneva talks were to be held by ambassadors, and repeated his belief that the only talks that would be fundamentally profitable would be those between China's Foreign Minister and Premier Chou En-lai, and United States officials of comparable rank and responsibility—that is to say, Secretary Dulles.

The Senator, who had so much to do with summoning the Big Four conference at Geneva and with assuring Senate support for the Administration on key foreign policy measures, expressed confidence that a high-level conference with Peiping would take place within a reasonable time.

So when Ambassador Wang Ping-nan at Geneva last week called upon the United States to engage in further talks "at a higher level" he was only repeating what the Democratic Senate leader on foreign policy had already proposed. It is to be hoped that Senator George's position will encourage Secretary Dulles to brave the displeasure of any Republican critics, and to make plans for such negotiations.

The October conference of foreign ministers arranged by the heads of state "at the summit" must, of course, take precedence. But a China conference might well take place as soon thereafter as Peiping completes fulfillment of its pledges on prisoners. In the meantime it might help if Secretary Dulles announced that this country is ready for such a conference on that condition.

Dirty Business at Army Post

If the Defense Department does not crack down on life insurance sharpshooters that prey around military posts, Congress will step in and tighten up the laws which regulate insurance company relations with military personnel. Such is the warning that a House Armed Services subcommittee, under Representative Hebert of Louisiana, gives to Secretary Wilson.

Judging by the finding of the subcommittee, the warning is fully justified. High pressure salesmen talk soldiers into buying policies they do not want. These unwanted policies then lapse after the payment of a few wasteful premiums. Only the glib agents get anything out of it. These fast operators even obtain military pay allotment blanks and have them ready for their victims to sign.

Legitimate insurance operators will suffer if the life insurance industry does not clean up this dirty business. Thanks to Congressman Hebert's subcommittee and its report the facts are now before the public.

Just Like the Platform

Vice President Nixon's farm speech at the plowing contest in Wabash, Ind., reminded us somehow of a certain Republican party platform. After defending the Administration's farm policy as "basically sound," and promising action to prevent a farm depression emergency, Mr. Nixon went on to outline a long-range Administration program. In addition to continuation of flexible price supports, this program included the following four points.

1. A "bold, imaginative" program to develop new domestic and foreign markets. This reminded us of the G.O.P. platform pledge "to furnish government assistance in disposing of surpluses in foreign trade."

2. Increased research to reduce farm costs and increase use of farm products. This reminded us of the G.O.P. platform pledge "to facilitate economical production and increased consumption," and "to promote the industrial use of farm products."

3. Continuation of soil conservation and similar programs. This reminded us of the G.O.P. platform pledge to pursue "the Republican principles of soil conservation and land retirement for the restoration of land resources."

4. A program of rural development to aid marginal farmers. This reminded us of the G.O.P. platform pledge for "acquisition of abandoned and non-productive farm land by voluntary sale or lease, and the devotion of such land to appropriate public use, such as watershed protection and flood prevention."

Mr. Nixon being the Republican Vice President in a Republican Administration, it may not seem worthy of remark that his ideas apparently parallel those expressed in a Republican platform. However, the G.O.P. platform which is quoted above was the platform of 1936. We believe that Mr. Nixon and his party will need either to develop these old ideas or to find new ideas if they are to meet the farm problem of 1956 in a "bold, imaginative" way.

Hurricanes Connie and Diane were lulu, but it's this Hurricane Alert that keeps hanging around.

Guerrillas and Malayan Amnesty

The newly elected native government of Malaya is off to a good start in one respect. Two days after an amnesty offer to all repentant Communist guerrillas, four of them, including one of the top leaders, surrendered. As most guerrillas are deep in the maw of Malaya's great green jungle, it may take weeks for all those who wish to surrender to do so.

Malaya still has a British High Commissioner, but its parliament is now in the hands of the newly formed Alliance party composed of Malays, Indians and Chinese. Thus the amnesty offer came from people of the same races as the Communists, most of whom are Chinese, and not from the British who have been fighting the guerrillas for seven years.

The Chinese Communists' claim that they have been aiding in a nationalist effort to upset foreign rule in Malaya is now destroyed.

A British News Man Leaves Us Between Book Ends

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Veteran Washington correspondent, going home, relates the twists of bold or fumbling leadership, and good sense and truculence, he found there; central drama was effort of conservatives to break idea of national responsibility, only to accept it.

Alastair Buchan in The London Sunday Observer

WASHINGTON. The Americans, so they tell you themselves, are a volatile people, quick to feel and to register the extremes of national optimism and despair.

This I have always tended to discount, feeling that Americans are inclined to do less than justice to their own capacity for political courage and consistency, and to confuse an articulate public opinion with an irresponsible one.

Bold and fumbling leadership, calm good sense and international truculence, gnawing fear of ghosts within the body political and robust calm when confronted with real problems, a near slump and high prosperity—the last four years have produced examples of all these.

In my brief span in Washington, I have had to report the growth of the black cloud of McCarthyism until it cast its shadow not only across American politics and policy, but across the intimacies of private life as well, and yet also to record Senator McCarthy's complete defection.

There have been two Presidents in the White House of totally dissimilar temperaments—Mr. Truman, who for his courage and ability to meet the challenge of his times is, in my opinion at least, to be rated as one of the greatest of his country's leaders, and Mr. Eisenhower, who has been both one of the worst and one of the best American Presidents.

From Risk to Renunciation

In the past four years—or rather in the past two and a half—the United States has come within a pen stroke of risking total war, and yet has now renounced war as an instrument of policy with a fervor that carries with it an ultimate danger of appeasement.

I have seen relations between the British and American Governments achieve a degree of intimacy unparalleled between sovereign nations in peacetime, degenerate into noisy and unworthy recrimination, and recover most of their earlier warmth.

Few foreign correspondents are cold-blooded enough to be dispassionate observers of the countries to which they are accredited. To see one's sane and rational mind degenerate into noisy and unworthy recrimination, and recover most of their earlier warmth, is a shattering experience. Particularly during 1954—"the Black Year"—was as nerve-wracking and discouraging to an Americophile Englishman as was the year of Munich for Americans who have been brought up to take the courage of England for granted.

After Meeting Hard Facts

Yet the past four years have been profoundly interesting to a student of the United States, more interesting even than the four that preceded them, though these witnessed the rapid development of an American sense of responsibility for international peace and stability from the Truman Doctrine of 1947, through the development of the Marshall Plan and the founding of NATO, to the Korean War. For in retrospect it is possible to see that the earlier phase of postwar American foreign policy, much more imaginative and positive though it was, was built on a shaky domestic political understanding.

The central drama of my years in Washington has been the attempt of the powerful conservative forces in America to break the pattern of international and national responsibility established by a far-sighted liberal minority, and yet their final and almost complete acceptance of it as their own. As one of my American colleagues has said, "Ike's great achievement has been to make the Republican party a signatory of NATO."

Much of the noise and confusion that surrounded the ending of 20 years of Democratic Administration and the first two of a Republican one were probably inevitable. For in American politics lack of power corrupts as absolutely as power itself. The dissociation of all but an intelligent fragment of the Republican party from the great domestic and international developments of two decades had inclined the party to a mixture of vindictiveness and nostalgia, and this only a steady confrontation of the hard facts of world responsibility could exorcise.

Counter-Revolution Fails

But three partly fortuitous developments made the course of the attempted counter-revolution more vicious and wasteful than it might otherwise have been: the low national morale of the early 1950s, resulting from the casualties and frustrations of the Korean war; the growth of a sense of fear and urgency as the end of the American hegemony in nuclear and strategic weapons became more apparent; and the election in 1952 of a President who did not then understand the American constitutional system or the obligations of direct leadership.

At the risk of great over-simplification I feel that it was the first of these on which McCarthyism chiefly fed; it was the second which, together with the belief of inexperienced Republican legislators and administrators that there was some cheaper and easier way to achieve world peace than the hard road their predecessors had charted, lay at the heart of the bomb-rattling of 1953 and 1954; and it was President Eisenhower's inexperience which permitted the atmosphere of uncertainty and chaos to last longer than it need have.

Exciting Years Ahead

The next phase in American politics is likely to center much more on national than on international affairs. With a birth rate which is now rising faster than that of most Asian countries, with a developing crisis in both elementary and high education, with acute problems of conservation and power, roads and housing policy, with a constantly accelerating pace of technological change, it is clear that the American society, far from becoming static, is on the verge of a new domestic revolution.

The interest of the coming years will not, it seems to me, lie in which group can hang a charge of treason or isolationism and irresponsibility on the other; that battle is over, though the field is still littered with the wounded.

It will lie in who can ride the new internal whirlwind; in whether the Republican party can become what it once was, the party of empirical reform like the British Conservative party, or whether it will go back again into the wilderness of Hooverism.

The Curse of the Costes

THE MALEDICTION, by Jean Giono. Translated from the French by Peter de Mendelssohn. (Crown Books, 157 pp., $3.)

This is the fifth novel by Jean Giono to be published in the United States since 1937. And although we seem to have a limited acquaintance with M. Giono over here, it doesn't require a vast amount of foreknowledge to perceive that "The Malediction" is one of the minor novels by this recently elected member of the Academie Goncourt and major figure in the pre-World War II period in French literature.

The story M. Giono deals with here is in the vein of his important work. A provincial family, the Costes, seems to be haunted by a vague sort of malignant curse which one of its forebears brought back from Mexico along with considerable wealth. The narrative is told by one of the citizens of the town in which the Costes live who himself becomes involved with the last of the Costes. It is rather intriguing to see how fate consistently works against the Costes, although it is a good deal more meaningful to see how the caprices of destiny which play with us all are interpreted by the narrator and the townsfolk, who tend to rejoice in such misfortunes, to be manifestations of the curse.

These people provide the material for some fascinating insights into the human behavior as he observes their animal-like competition for information about the mysterious stranger called Monsieur Joseph, their fabrications about his past, their primitive fears of the curse which will touch them, their pathological interest in everything that happens on the Coste estate (Le Moulin de Polonge), and their amazement that old Monsieur Joseph should marry the grotesquely beautiful Julie, the last of the Coste line, and dare the curse to descend on his new family—which it inevitably does. It's as if nothing ever happens to these people, and they are delighted when everything seems to happen to the Costes, doubly so when it appears that their own fated afflictions may be heaped on the Costes.

One of M. Giono's real gifts is a facility to completely immerse one in a world of his creation. When you repeat the scheme of "The Malediction" it seems quite tenuous. But when you are reading the novel it all seems intensely real, making contact with all of one's sensory apparatus. We do not understand his people (perhaps Giono does not understand them intellectually either) but they disturb us with their insistence on being alive. But with all these attributes, including a finely developed sense of the irony and comedy mixed up in life, Jean Giono is a far lesser novelist in "The Malediction" than he was a year ago in "The Horseman on the Roof." For when "The Malediction" is finished it is finished. But the Costes were not lofty enough to endure a fate that was tragic. They were not lowly enough to be pitiful. If anyone, it's the villagers we remember, not the Costes; and I doubt that is the way M. Giono intended.

The Drama in U.S.S.R.

THE BYELOUSSIAN THEATER AND DRAMA, by Vladimir Sedukhin, edited by Edgar M. Lehman, foreword by Ernest J. Simmons. (Research Program on the U.S.S.R., N. Y., 537 pp., $4.)

The theater in White Russia flowered immediately after the 1917 Communist revolution, but bureaucratic regimentation cut its vigor, and stagnation set in with the Stalin purges of the 1930s. This is much the same pattern for Russia, generally, described in a study previously published by the Research Program on the U.S.S.R., "Soviet Theaters, 1917-41."

THOMAS L. STOKES

President Eisenhower's "Golf Cabinet"

WASHINGTON. AS PRESIDENT THEODORE ROOSEVELT had his "tennis cabinet" and President Hoover had his "medicine ball cabinet," so President Eisenhower has his "golf cabinet" which was in session again last weekend at Denver as it was two weeks ago on the Labor day weekend.

The make-up of the Eisenhower "golf cabinet," however, is somewhat different from the Roosevelt and Hoover groups. It is drawn exclusively from business, industry and finance. It includes representatives of that upper moneyed strata for which "Golf" is the commonly accepted slang description among our people and whose counterparts of an earlier generation, incidentally, "Teddy" Roosevelt loved to chastise from the stump.

In a way he was of them, and so understood them. But for his companions he chose less staid, sedate characters, and his "tennis cabinet" consisted of men in government, diplomacy, arts, letters and audience with whom he discussed and argued government, public affairs, art, literature and science on horseback rides and hikes as well as on the court.

Stone in Hoover's Group.

Their outdoor activities ranged far beyond tennis. Theodore Roosevelt, the apostle of the strenuous life, was only 42 when he became President and was boiling over with physical energy and intellectual curiosity.

Herbert Hoover's "medicine ball cabinet," which could be seen early of a morning awkwardly tossing the ball at one another on the White House back lawn—embraced members of the Cabinet and White House staff, a Supreme Court justice—Harlan Fiske Stone—who later was Chief Justice, and two well-known journalists—Frank Kent and the late Mark Sullivan.

Both these former Republican Presidents drew upon their companions of these leisure diversions to enlarge their knowledge and understanding of government and public affairs. It has been said of Theodore Roosevelt, for instance, and his custom of quizzing younger men in the second and third echelons of Government that "from his playmates of the open he obtained a view of the workings of Government that was obscured by red tape from their supporters."

Issue for Democrats.

President Eisenhower gets completely out of the realm of government with his "golf cabinet," though these men do, of course, have their own interest in the policies of Government, as their business interests are directly affected.

It must be said that the President is very frank and open in the associates he picks well off duty. To the point, in truth, where Democrats who are making alleged "big business influence" their chief issue against the Republican Administration explain that they need no little more than point to newspaper accounts of the guests for golf and bridge at Denver.

Weekend Guests Listed.

They were: W. Alton Jones, president, Cities Service Oil Co.; Robert W. Woodruff, chairman of board, Coca-Cola Co.; L. F. McCollum, president, Continental Oil Co.; William Reed, chairman of board, General Electric; Cliff Roberts, New York investment banker, and E. D. Slater, president, Frankfort Distillers.

Three of those—Messrs. Jones, Roberts and Slater—were back again for golf and bridge last weekend with the President, and were listed along with a number of others from business and finance.

Four More Years of It.

After this weekend of golf and bridge with his guests, the President goes to his favorite fishing spot near Fraser, Colo., on the ranch of his Denver banker friend, Axel Nielsen, where he will spend most of the week.

According to news dispatches from Denver, the President has golfed or fished every day, except Sundays, in the nearly five weeks he has been on his work-play vacation in Colorado.

His success in working out such a pleasant schedule for his tour of duty in the White House, including his arrangement when in Washington for golf during the week at Burning Tree Club and weekends either at Gettysburg or Camp David, has encouraged party leaders in their belief that he will run again for four years more of the same.

CITES 10-YEAR DELAY IN BEST MEDICAL CARE

Barnes Hospital Director Blames Inadequate Training of Some Older Doctors.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 19.—Ten years will elapse before the quality of medical care which now exists in United States medical centers can be made available to the population at large, Dr. Frank R. Bradley, director of Barnes Hospital in St. Louis and president of the American Hospital Association, said here today.

Dr. Bradley discussed the "estimated" time lag in an address to a convention of the American Hospital Association which opened here today.

This period would elapse, he said, "before hospitals and the medical profession can begin to meet the demand and bring our abilities and facilities in diagnosing and curing people, both in quantity and quality, within hailing distances of what we know are the possibilities and, in fact, what actually is available in our medical centers in the way of diagnosis and treatment."

Explosive Achievement.

Public awareness at the turn of the century of the desirability of good medical care was followed by "an explosive achievement in medical science by the leading medical schools and a rapid accumulation of knowledge and ability to cure the sick and injured with specific drugs and definitive surgery," Dr. Bradley said.

But medical schools were reorganized in 1914 he added. Because of this, he pointed out, "many physicians now in practice did not have the good fortune to graduate from grade A medical schools."

And because the largest hospital growth was between 1920 and 1930, Dr. Bradley said, "fewer still have had opportunity to have an internship in a hospital. As a result not all doctors are fully qualified to be on a hospital staff."

'Complete Change.'

He said the picture would be "completely changed" over a ten-year period.

"Then we will have doctors staffing out hospitals," Dr. Bradley said, "who are able to achieve in diagnosis and cure all of the advances that are now available and will be made available within the next ten years."

In his president's report submitted to the convention today, Dr. Bradley said a greater number of doctors must be trained, and more of them in new scientific medical techniques, before any "cover-all" plan for medical insurance could be carried out.

U.S.-EUROPEAN UNDERSTANDING URGED BY POPE

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Sept. 19 (AP)—Pope Pius XII urged yesterday that there be "better mutual understanding" between the United States and countries of Europe.

The 79-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church spoke while receiving delegates attending the fifth Congress of European-American Associations. Among those in his audience were Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and former French Premier Georges Bidault.

"The first objective that I propose to you," he said, "is to favor between the United States and European countries a better mutual understanding."

The pope declared the Western nations prized the importance of this intervention. We like to believe that beyond the economic aid and testimony of international solidarity that it gave, it is preparing a higher conception of man and of human society."

"Nobody," he said, "is unaware of the large generosity of this intervention. We like to believe that beyond the economic aid and testimony of international solidarity that it gave, it is preparing a higher conception of man and of human society."

Yanks, 2 Games Ahead, Appear to Have Flag About Wrapped Up

They'll Be Calling It The Little Seven.

ONLY MISSOURI's king-sized effort against heavily favored MARYLAND saved the Big Seven Conference from probably its blackest football weekend since the league's members pulled away from the Missouri Valley 27 years ago.

The point is, you see, that even though the Big Seven is one giant and six pygmies, OKLAHOMA against the field, the general caliber of competition within the conference has come up. COLORADO'S climb, a revival at KANSAS STATE and a rushing activity at IOWA STATE largely have been responsible for strengthening the second division, it seemed.

Except, however, for Mizou's splendid showing in a 13-12 defeat against a top-rated team, the Big Seven fell flat on its face Saturday in four other inter-league tests, three of which it was favored to win. Oklahoma and Colorado were idle.

Kansas State, picked to beat WYOMING, fell before the Skyline Conference team, 38 to 20. Iowa State, a choice over DENVYER's Skyline kings, fell by a 19-7 score. Rebuilding KANSAS, as expected, lost to TEXAS CHRISTIAN, but even more one-sided than anticipated, 47 to 13.

The big shocker, though, was in NEBRASKA'S 6-0 upset on its own field at the hands of a University of HAWAII team the Cornhuskers had clouted last Thanksgiving day at Honolulu, 55 to 0.

The Big Seven? Not at all big now.

Deep in the Heart of...

AMONG Saturday's surprises was tough little TEXAS TECH'S 20-14 triumph over big TEXAS, marking the Red Raiders' first victory over the state university (in eight tries) and the Longhorns' last home-opener defeat in history. And, mind you, just when Texas had come up with a new mascot, a longhorn steer appropriately orange and white, the school's colors.

ANDY GUSTAFSON, coach of MIAMI University of Ohio, must have all his Hurricanes carrying whistles to class as a reminder that only the referee's whistle can blow the ball dead. A red flag thrown by another official to indicate a foul—such as the Miami player ran into GEORGIA TECH safety man trying to make a fair catch—can be distracting, of course, just as the umpire's horn used to bother some unthinking athletes. But as Tech's PAUL ROTENBERG proved when he scooped up the punt jarred loose from his illegally-tackled teammate and rambled for a touchdown, a flag doesn't stop the play.

BUS MERTES, former BRADLEY coach and now Kansas State's, must have been especially embarrassed after the Wildcats' loss to Wyoming because he'd spent all his time gearing his team for JOE MASIROGIO-VANNI's passes and praising the Brooklyn cowboy's sharp-shooting. However, the multiple-syllabled Wyoming star threw only four times and led his team to 297 yards on the ground for six big TDs.

HENRY VASCONCELLOS, coach at Hawaii, had a hard time fielding a grounder by Billy Klaus and Ted Williams walked. Grim got Jackie Jensen on a long fly to center field to end that inning, then retired 15 successive batters.

Willard Nixon pitched for Boston. He had beaten the Yankees four of five times this season and eight out of nine over two seasons.

He got into trouble right off that when Hank Bauer, Irv Noren and Gil McDougald singled, McDougald driving in Bauer and putting Noren on third. Berra walked and Noren scored as Joe Collins hit into a double play.

The run which proved to be the winner came in the fifth. Gerry Coleman started with a single and Grim, trying to sacrifice, popped out. Bauer sent up a pop foul outside first base which Norm Zaichin had in his glove, then dropped.

Bauer then got a single and Noren walked to fill the bases. McDonald topped the ball down the third base line. Ted Lepico fielded it but had to take his only play, that to first base, and Coleman scored.

Rizuto was honored with his day. And as he had requested, the nearly $8000 collected will be placed in a fund to aid deserving students in his home town of Hillsdale, N.J. He also received a plaque and a tray engraved with the names of his teammates.

The final game of the regular season at Yankee Stadium drew 54,501, sending the Yankees' season attendance to 1,490,136, or 13,965 above that of last year. It was the first increase since 1948.

Tigers Get 6 in Inning. The defeat of Cleveland came at the hands of 20-year-old Bob Miller, beaten by the Yanks last week. At that time there was considerable comment because Detroit Manager Bucky Harris used an untalented youngster in a game involving the pennant.

Cleveland Tailspin Reaches 4th in Row

By W. J. McGoogan
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Jubilant New York Yankees and their followers feel that they have all but wrapped up the American League pennant and looked forward today to slamming the door in the faces of the Cleveland Indians during the next three days when they'll be playing the Washington Senators in Washington.

Right now the Yankees lead by two full games. They have two more to play than the Indians, seven to five. They have an advantage of three games on the all important lost side and in their remaining contests will be playing no tougher opposition than will Cleveland. They have the three with Washington, and four with Boston, while the Indians play Chicago twice and Detroit three times.

The pesky Tigers added to the Indians' most disastrous tailspin of the year by whipping the Tribe yesterday, 10-3, for the third time. The setback was the Indians' fourth straight. The Chicago White Sox all but slid out of the picture, losing 8-1 to sixth place Kansas City.

The Magic Combination. Now the Yankees need only a combination of five victories or Cleveland defeats to meet the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League in the World Series scheduled to start Sept. 28. Any combination of two Yankee victories or Chicago defeats would put out the White Sox.

The veteran Casey Stengel, Yankee manager, and the rest of the club can be excused for feeling a little optimistic over what the week will bring even if they do expect to face Maury McDermott tonight, Bob Porterfield and Chuck Stobbs at Washington.

Stengel said he would use Don Larsen and Whitey Ford and for the third game he was undecided.

There is, of course, that troublesome ill of the Yankees, Bill Skowron says he can play when he's needed; Mickey Mantle felt better yesterday and took batting practice even with the pulled muscle in his leg. Alvin Rizzo, although he didn't play as the Yankees beat the Red Sox, 3 to 2, for a fifth straight victory, said the only ill effect he had from being struck on the head Saturday was a headache and he'll be able to get in at any time.

Joe Collins played first base despite a sore muscle in his arm.

Even with all of that, the Yankees seem to have what it takes to win when they need it.

Bob Turley faltered badly in the first three innings in the final game against the Red Sox, but Bob Grim stepped in and stopped the Red Sox without a hit for the seven innings he worked. He relieved Turley with none out in the third inning and runners on first and second and the score tied at 2-2.

He got the first batter he faced on a pop foul to Yogi Berra and the next one hit into a double play which Grim started himself.

After that the only two Boston base runners were in the third when Billy Martin threw wild to first after fielding a grounder by Billy Klaus and Ted Williams walked.

Grim got Jackie Jensen on a long fly to center field to end that inning, then retired 15 successive batters.

Willard Nixon pitched for Boston. He had beaten the Yankees four of five times this season and eight out of nine over two seasons.

Yankee Who Made Things Grim for Boston

New York Pitcher BOB GRIM shown during his great, no-hit relief performance against the Red Sox at Yankee Stadium Sunday. In the last seven innings of the Yanks' 3-2 victory, he faced only 22 men, and only two reached base, one on a walk and the other on an error. A 20-game winner in his freshman year in 1954, Grim has been bothered by arm trouble most of this season. The victory was only his sixth against five losses, but it enabled his team to increase its American League lead over the fading Indians to two games.

The New York Giants dropped a 7-5 decision to the Dodgers while the Philadelphia Phillies split with the Pittsburgh Pirates, losing the first, 5-2, and winning the nightcap, 2-1. Cards' $40,000 Bonus Pitcher To Start Against Cubs Tonight

It's out of the frying pan into the fire tonight for the Cardinals, who dropped a 2-1 heart-breaker in 11 innings to the Braves in the season finale between the teams at Milwaukee's County Stadium yesterday.

The Cardinals played dead as their old nemesis, Warren Spahn, shot them down for the fifth time in six season engagements and extended his lifetime collection of victories over St. Louis to 41 as against 22 defeats.

They return home only to meet up with the likes of the left-handed slants of the Chicago Cubs' Paul Minner, who has a string of five straight working against the Redbirds. Lyndall McDaniel, 19-year-old right-hander recently signed for an estimated $40,000 bonus, will start for the Cards.

Speaking of fires, Manager Harry Walker was on the gridlock by Milwaukee's second guessers for his strategy in the eleventh with the bases loaded and First Baseman George Crowe at bat. He had Harvey Haddix, a southpaw, heated up in the bullpen and perfect percentage, as his critics saw it, would have been for him to come in and pitch to Crowe.

But Larry Jackson, who had turned in an excellent relief job after entering in the eighth, in support of starter Tom Poholsky, was permitted to remain and his George promptly lined a single to score Billy Bruton, who had tripled with one out, for the decisive tally.

Two of the blows off Poholsky resulted in the first Milwaukee run in the opening inning, a double to left by Bruton and a scoring two-bagger by Henry Aaron. Only one Brave got on base in the next seven innings.

Seven Hits Off Spahn. Spahn gave up seven hits. Two of them came in the seventh to deprive him of a shut-out and a victory in regulation time. Alex Grammas led off with a single and scooted to third on Nelson Burbrink's pop fly hit to right. Ken Boyer's sacrifice fly did the rest.

Stan Musial ran his consecutive game string to 612, playing first base and hobbling around with his right leg encased in tape. The Man doubled to left center in the first.

The Cardinals made a desperate bid for a triumph in the eleventh when Red Schoendienst slapped a single to center to open the inning. Musial sacrificed and a wild pitch advanced Red to third. But Repulski was purposely passed and Bruton came flying in for Bill Virdon's short fly to keep Schoendienst on third. Johnny Logan at short made a neat play to throw out Bill Sarni and retire the side.

A crowd of 34,695 saw the Braves clinch second place by virtue of their second triumph in the three-game series. The throng boosted Milwaukee's home attendance for 70 dates to 2,005,836, marking the second straight year the Braves have gone over the 2,000,000 figure at County Stadium.

Second Baseman Don Blasingame and Shortstop Dick Schofield of the Cardinals' Omaha farm will join the parent club. Two other Omaha players, Catcher Dick Rand and First Baseman Tom Alston, will report tomorrow.

Wins Park Golf. Nonie Carroll had a score of 41 to win a blind holes golf competition at Forest Park. Neil Nelson and L. Brugere tied in a flight with a score of 51 each.

Dodger Job Seems Safe for Alston in '56

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Sept. 19 (UP)—Manager Walter Alston has been assured by President Walter O'Malley of the Brooklyn Dodgers that he would be rehired to pilot the club in 1956, it was learned today.

O'Malley made the "announcement" last night at a belated pennant-clinching celebration, attended by the team, club officials and a limited number of newspaper men.

"We have no doubt about who is going to be our manager next year," O'Malley said as he introduced Alston for a speech.

In addressing the gathering, Alston thanked O'Malley and said if he was to be retained, he wanted his complete coaching staff to be rehired with him. The Dodger coaches are Billy Herman, Jake Pfler and Joe Becker.

It was believed that O'Malley made the announcement earlier than had been expected in order to give Alston and the Dodgers a psychological boost for the World Series.

O'Malley said he was happy with the way Alston "handled everything" and said he wanted him back next year. "I know this isn't December, but there is little doubt, in fact no doubt, that he will manage the Dodgers next year," O'Malley said.

Missouri Sets Sights on Michigan, Bears and Illini Eye Openers

Roberts To Join Tigers at Ann Arbor

By Bob Broeg

They whistled while they worked today down at Columbia, where Missouri made a surprising showing against mortified Maryland Saturday, and Illinois and Washington University turned the corner of practice tedium and headed to the electrifying expectancy of actual competition.

The Bears of Carl Snavely will open Saturday afternoon at Francis Field against Gale Bullman's Missouri Miners, traditional Hilltop rivals who lost their opener to the Pittsburg (Kan.) Teachers, 33 to 14.

Ray Elliot's Illini will travel across country, meanwhile, for their first 1955 test at Berkeley against Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf's University of California Golden Bears, who were defeated at Pittsburg in their first game, 27 to 7.

Just as Tough.

Don Faurot's Tigers of Ol' Mizzou, their prospects as well as spirits presumably better after a hard-luck 13-12 loss to nationally-ranked Maryland, will go up against another contender for the mythical United States collegiate title, meeting Michigan at Ann Arbor.

"They," Faurot said of Bennie Oosterbaan's Wolverines, "will be just as tough as Maryland—maybe tougher—with 24 letters, a good multiple offense and a great end (All-American Ron Kramer)."

Immensely proud of his home-area athletes' determined effort against Maryland, the veteran Mizzou mentor said he believed Terry Roberts, All-Big Seven lineman two years ago, would be available at Ann Arbor—he missed the Maryland game—but that Sonny Stringer, No. 1 left halfback, probably would be sidelined.

Stringer suffered a sprained ankle late in the thrilling game with Maryland, leaving sophomore Jerry Curtright as the foremost left half, though Faurot noted that Dick Studer, second team quarterback, had some experience at the position.

Stringer Is Out.

"We'll miss Stringer, all right, but otherwise we came through in good shape," the coach observed. "And I was really pleased with the great comeback the boys made after their slow start. Failure to kick the extra points was disappointing."

Jimmy Hunter said the second one was close but he thought we'd made it—just as he still played Maryland even."

Again praising the Tigers' defense, Faurot said he thought the Mizzou offense needed polish and drive, a condition to be given attention this week.

Looking back on failure to try for a first down with a foot to go on the Missouri 40 early in the second quarter—End Bill Walker of Maryland then blocked a punt there to set up the Terp's second touchdown—Faurot second-guessed his own instructions.

"We should have run with the ball," he said.

RAIN IN SOUTHWEST DROPS WHEAT PRICE

Feed Grains Rally and Score Substantial Price Gains.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Feed grains and rye forged ahead while soybeans barely held steady and wheat declined on the Board of Trade today.

Fairly light receipts of cash corn and oats, along with steady prices in the spot market, gave support to futures of those two grains. Rye was ahead in sympathy with gains at Minneapolis and Winnipeg.

Wheat was under pressure as a result of ample rains in the southwest over the weekend, which traders felt might result in increased offerings of cash wheat by producers.

Soybeans sank at the outset on receipt of 90 cars of cash beans. September lost the most. While beans recovered, they never developed any real strength.

SAVED FROM WILDERNESS

Charles Dickens of San Diego, Calif., is interviewed by radio announcer after being brought out of the woods near Spirit Lake, Wash., yesterday. Dickens, 70 years old, and a companion, Charles Allger, 85, of Tacoma, Wash., were lost for six days in rugged forest country as they prospected for uranium. Searchers found the old-timers 20 miles from the spot where they were last seen a week ago setting out with a geiger counter. The elderly prospectors were taken to hospital, where they were found to be in good condition despite their ordeal.

INTO A NEW COUNTRY

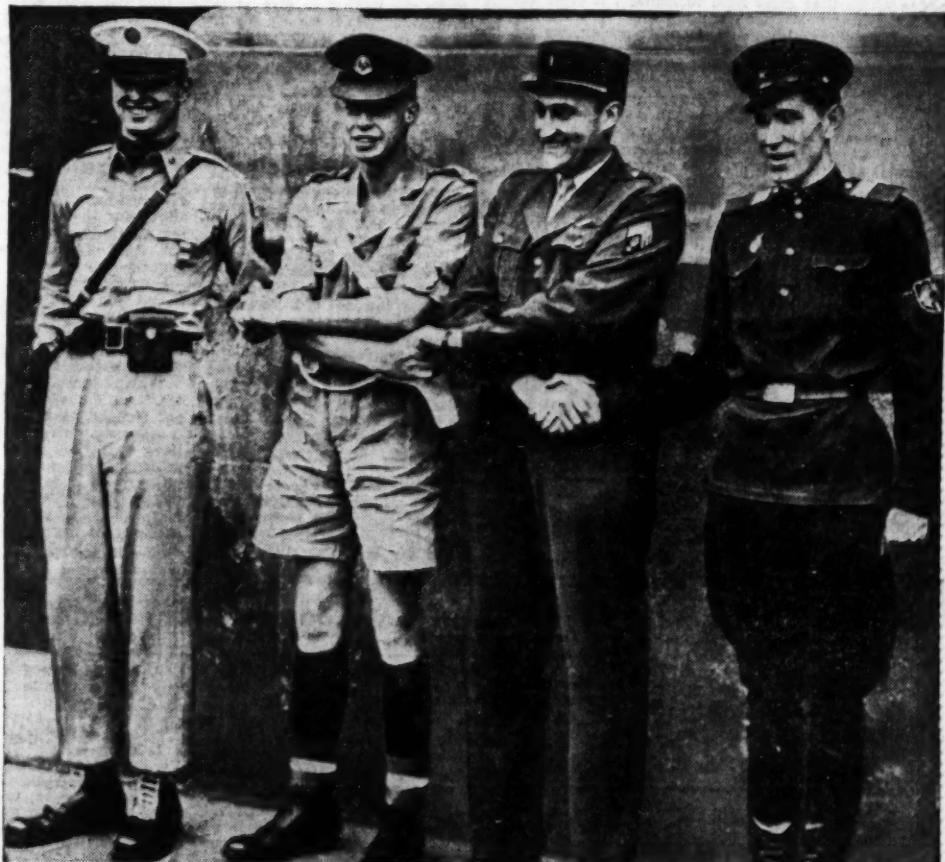

William J. Walls of San Diego, Calif., carrying Okiko, his Japanese bride, down the gangplank as they arrived in Los Angeles harbor yesterday. The 24-year-old ex-sailor met his wife when he was stationed at the United States naval base in Sasebo, Japan. He returned to Japan after his release from the Navy and married Okiko last May 27, her twenty-first birthday.

FAMED PATROL STANDS DOWN

The International Military Police Patrol, famed symbol of the Allied Occupation Forces in Austria, join in a farewell handshake in front of the former Allied Control Commission building in Vienna after their last patrol Saturday. Most of the four-power occupation troops having left the country, the patrol officially ceased its functions last Wednesday. Members of final patrol are (from left) Pfc. Richard R. Mortara, United States; Sgt. Robert Goslin, Great Britain; Sgt. Claude Tanquerel, France, and Sgt. Victor Venitschenko of Russia.

Dog of the Week

Susie, Dog of the Week at the Humane Society Shelter, displays her perky nature as she peeks inquisitively around the edge of the door with a look that is usually reserved for those cold, damp nights, when the master doesn't want to take her on that walk. Mostly terrier, she is 6 months old and her coloring is black and white. She is available for adoption on application, in person, at the shelter at 1210 Macklind avenue.

A Lot of Medicine Coming for Viewers

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP).

DOCTORS are going to be big this year. Doctors were big last year, too, and maybe will be next year. After that, who knows? It's a question of how much the public can stand, and the public has demonstrated that it can stand quite a lot. After all, the soap operas years ago moved into the hospitals and have hardly budged out of them ever since, except, of course, into court for the murder trials.

JOHN CROSBY

My own medical boiling point is low. I was watching "Medic" a week or so ago and it was about a girl whose colon had to be cut out. This led to certain functional rearrangements which I'd rather not go into.

THE DOCTORS, I realize, have to roam all over the human anatomy, but I don't know that the writers have to follow them just everywhere. Not all the "Medic" shows are morbid. The other night "Medic" was about a prizefighter felled by diabetes. The doctors got him in the nick of time, restored him to life and taught him how to live with a disease he'll be stuck with the rest of his days. Well, there are a lot of diabetes around and this one had a certain educational value not so much for diabetes who must know all this to survive but to the rest of us who ought to sympathize with their problems.

Just how far medical education should go is a problem not even the doctors have ever agreed on, some of them holding to the notion that you shouldn't tell laymen a blessed thing—it just worries them. Still, they seem to be co-operating with the TV people in all manner of ways.

ABC-TV HAS JUST STARTED a program called "Medical Horizons" which is designed to acquaint the public a little more thoroughly with the advances in the medical world. The first one was, in the words of the moderator, Quincy Howe, "A journey through the human heart." Most of the operative techniques discussed on this one have been in use for 10 years or so but I imagine they'd be eye-openers to the average layman.

The staff of the Mayo Clinic showed Howe and the rest of us some of the things that go wrong with the heart and how the medics repair the damage. Core of the show was a demonstration of a heart-lung machine, a magnificently complicated gadget, which does the patient's breathing and blood-pumping for him while the docs are stitching up his heart. Gave me quite a turn to watch it work. This is a live show with real doctors and, considering the difficulties under which they must have to manage, it came off splendidly.

The way things look now, by next spring, we all ought to be terribly well-informed about a bewildering variety of diseases and their treatment. The first "March of Medicine" program will be televised by NBC-TV tomorrow (on KSD-TV at 8:30 p.m.) and it'll be about the use of the atom in medicine, particularly radioactive isotopes in cancer treatment. One feature will be a special report on Russian medical strides in this field.

THIS YEAR "MEDIC" is going to concentrate on illnesses that have psychosomatic aspects including asthma, menopause, cancer phobia, sterility, acne, obesity, and juvenile schizophrenia. If your favorite ailment is not among those listed, then it will undoubtedly bob up somewhere else. And not necessarily on the programs that specialize in medicine like "Medic." Practically all the programs from Edward R. Murrow's "polio" to "Mr. Citizen" (epilepsy) have taken a whack at it.

If you're at all attentive, you will not only acquire a thoroughgoing medical education, but probably discover in yourself symptoms of diseases that you hitherto never heard of.

Tips for Teens

By Elinor Williams

WHAT should you do when you find that one of your girl-friends is not a real friend at all? Keep on being friendly with her, end your friendship by telling her off or tell everybody what she has done? This is the problem in a junior high school girl's letter:

"I am 13 years old. I have two close friends. One is very jealous of me. I like a boy who lives in her block. If I go somewhere and she doesn't come, she tells the boy that I don't like him, etc. What can I do? Should I leave her flat or just let it go?"

Answer—It's easy to see that this girl cannot be trusted as real, loyal friend, so why go on giving her your friendship? It would be better to spend your time with other girls; you can make other friends, if you try.

BUT THE WAY you end the friendship is important. This way will cause the least trouble: Keep on speaking to her in a pleasant, friendly way when you see her, but don't stop to talk or linger with her. Plan to spend your spare time with other girls, and if she suggests that you two get together, be pleasant and polite, but brief... tell her that you can't because you're going to be "busy." If she asks what you're going to do, just reply that it's a "long story and you have to go now" or something similar. In this way, you can end the friendship without an unpleasant break or a scene that might make her tell more lies about you.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A GIRL WRITES: "I'm not engaged, but have been going 'steady' with the same man for over a year. For a long time he has expressed a wish to have a black onyx ring with his initials. I was all set to buy this for him for his birthday when someone told me it was in very bad taste for me to give him a ring. Before I give up the idea and get him something he wants much less, I'd like your final word."

When a girl is not engaged, a ring from her to a man could easily be misinterpreted. In other words, the first ring should be from him to you.

The Scheduling of Time Is Important

The Student Is More on His Own in Doing College Work Than He Ever Was in High School

By Paul A. Landis

Second of two installments from the book, "So This Is College," published by McGraw-Hill Book Co. of New York, aimed at helping to solve the problems of college students and teen-agers who look forward to "higher learning." The author is Professor of Sociology at the State College of Washington.

ONE of the first facts of college life a freshman discovers is the great difference between studying for high school classes and those of college.

High school teachers seem very concerned about how their students get along, whether or not they understand their work. They give special help when it is needed and often give class time to prepare for assignments. Many students experience a catastrophe, such as Henry recounts here, before they get wise to the impersonal business of preparing for college classes. He writes:

"At the first class meeting, our Psych I instructor casually announced that we were to have read the first 10 chapters of the textbook by Friday of the fourth week of school."

"He said that unless we asked questions, he would assume that we were having no difficulty with reading and understanding it. That was the only announcement he made."

"For the next few weeks, he lectured on various things and they gave special help when it was needed and often gave class time to prepare for assignments. I decided psych was a snap."

"Then, after about a month of school, we found an examination waiting for us when we entered the classroom. I'll never forget the howls of agony that went up. At least half of the class, including yours truly, had never opened the book."

The student is more on his own in doing college work than he ever was in high school. Many professors don't even bother to call the roll. As one chem prof put it, "I don't care where they learn the material—in class or at a soda fountain—just so they know it by exam time."

Many students have a difficult time adjusting to this new independence and self-direction. For some, the soda fountain or the student lounge is just too great a temptation. "I'll work twice as hard tomorrow and make up for it," they tell themselves. But students who can cut classes and still do good work are few and far between.

This does not mean that college teachers are indifferent to whether students sink or swim. As a matter of fact, most of them are willing to give some individual help if we ask for it. But the difference between the high school and college teacher is this:

The high school teacher sought out the trouble and confused students, practically forcing them to accept help. The college teacher assumes that his students are old enough and wise enough to know when they need help and to ask him or someone else for help if they need it.

Most college freshmen experience a rude awakening along about the second week or so. At first, the idea of having each class only every other day, often only once or twice a week, seems wonderful.

From the end of the class on Monday morning until it meets again on Wednesday seems like a small eternity. But they soon learn that the fewer the class meetings, the larger the assignments.

Then, too, college texts aren't written as simply as high-school books. As one student put it, "I never sit down with just my text, but always with two books. One is Webster's dictionary."

"NO GROUP SLEEPS SO LITTLE AT NIGHT AND DOZES SO MUCH AT DAY... AS DO COLLEGE STUDENTS."

Another student admitted, "I always read my assignments at least twice. The first reading gives me an idea of what the author is talking about. The second time around I begin to understand what he is talking about—sometimes."

So the belief that there is plenty of time for everything soon evaporates. By the second month or so most freshmen are wondering how in the world they can ever finish all their assignments in the time allowed.

MANAGING time demands a schedule—not just a "more-or-less" schedule in our minds, but one that is carefully thought out, detailed, and right there in black and white so we can't ignore it. It should allot time for each of the major activities throughout the day—classes, meals, special recreation, sleep and study.

Such as this morning schedule of a sophomore honor student:

8:00—Chem. I lecture in Room 407, Science Building.

9:00—Review notes from chem. lecture in library.

9:30—Review assignment for Society II in library.

10:00—Soc. II lecture in Room 7, McKinley Hall.

11:00—Quickly review notes from Soc. II lecture in library.

11:30—Read Chem. I assignment for Thursday.

12:00—Lunch.

A good schedule is never a ball and chain. One of its values is its flexibility. By leaving an occasional hour or so completely undesignated, we leave ourselves room for special or unexpected events. Such free time allows for the occasional shifting of study so that we need not miss out on unscheduled experiences.

I once interrupted a young friend who was poring over his textbook and asked him to tell me briefly just what he was reading. His answer was about what I expected.

"I don't know what I'm reading," he admitted. "I haven't yet stopped to think it over." Many students mistakenly believe that they save time by reading an assignment at breakneck speed and then stopping to figure out what it said. Most textbooks are written to be studied, not just skimmed. By the time he gets around to "thinking it over," the average student has forgotten many of the author's important points. Some must even waste the time they have just saved by reading the very same material a second time.

The trick is to read and think at the same time. Whenever you discover your mind slipping off into daydreams as you absently skim the words, pull back to reality. After a week or so of enforced concentration, you will find that you get more from your assignments with just one reading when the reading is accompanied by thought.

College is organized on the belief that young people who attend it are mature enough to manage their own affairs.

There is more discipline than in the work world of adults, but less than most young people have experienced before. How to learn to use freedom and opportunity is the real test of the teen-ager on the doorstep of adulthood.

Those who finish a college course successfully are granted a degree. This degree will mean that the graduate represents the college and its training program for the rest of his life. If college degrees are to mean anything, and if a given college is to maintain a reputation for doing its work well, certain requirements have to be met.

"Requirements" are never fully satisfactory. They mean that we must take some courses and have classes with some professors of little or no interest. This is part of the price of obtaining a degree.

"Electives" are more pleasant, but often the "requirements," which seemed so foolish, unnecessary or difficult, also prove to be worthwhile.

There have, of course, been geniuses who refused to harness themselves with college rules and quit rather than face the music. Great authors, inventors and other persons of distinction have sometimes been in the group who decided to go out on their own rather than face up to discipline.

We shall, however, find more, even of the geniuses, who saw it through and profited by the experience. Life everywhere is full of requirements. It is a part of adulthood to meet them.

For many there is too much social life on the college campus; for some, too little. A balanced social life is desirable for the well-balanced personality. While some scientists and authors live as introverts, most human beings need, as well as enjoy, the social side of life.

COLLEGE should help correct aspects of personality that have been a little out of balance, that is for those who are willing to look themselves over and work at it.

Those who are inclined to be too bookwormish should throw the books aside on Friday or Saturday night for some social life. Those who have done little else but socialize should begin to act like adults and settle down to a fixed routine of work, putting it ahead of bull sessions and dances.

I suppose there is no group alive that sleeps so little at night and dozes so much during the day at their work and in classes as do college students. There is so much going on around the college campus that many think they can't miss any of it. There is no time to sleep.

In dull lethargy they ponder over textbooks during the wee hours and keep awake all night before exams. Such behavior indicates poor management of time.

A few can get along for quite a period on four or five hours of sleep. But some break in health or nerves under the strain.

COLLEGE isn't the real marathon. That begins in the adult world in parenthood and business or professional competition. It is well to conserve a little steam for the long pull ahead.

It is a part of maturity to be able to leave some things out of the program. At no time in life will anyone be able to participate in everything or be a part of all that goes on. Selective participation in things which lead in the direction one wishes to go is the secret of achieving success, as well as of having time.

As important as having a regular study schedule in the cultivation of the habit of pitching in and working when one is at it.

It means getting at hand everything one needs to work with. It means getting at the job promptly, without a lot of wishing and groaning.

It means concentration on the task at hand rather than dreaming about last week's date or the one coming tomorrow. This capacity to concentrate will grow with practice.

Many who go to college expect to be leaders in the professions when their degrees are granted. The professions mean a lifetime of study and concentration.

We Visit Beautiful Thai Temple

By Eleanor Roosevelt

BANGKOK.

I HAD a busy day, what with three consecutive meetings of the World Federation of the United Nations Associations.

After our morning session, we had the privilege of seeing the palace rooms where diplomats are received and present their credentials to the king. We also were shown some of the rooms used by the king for special ceremonies and then we proceeded to the magnificent temple of the emerald Buddha. The gliding and the porcelain set into these buildings are unsurpassed, I think, for beauty of color, and the gold altar which is built up to hold the beautifully carved emerald Buddha is very impressive.

One notices the priests here in the streets because they all wear bright yellow garments. They carry bags in which offerings may be placed by the people, since a priest lives on gifts. He is only allowed to eat two meals a day and his life must be very frugal.

Almost every young man, I am told, feels it his duty to be a priest for a short time. He must serve for three and a half months at least, but he may serve longer.

By doing so, he ensures the happiness of his elders in the next phase of existence. This is done to make the Buddhist religion and of their obligations to support it.

Every young man serves two years in the army as well.

Last evening I talked with the minister in charge of economic development and he told me that his greatest problem was unemployment among the people. Nearly all the people are farmers and rice is the main crop, but they can only produce one crop a year and then the land is too dry.

They are building a big dam in the north for irrigation and hope there to be able to get water on the land and produce two crops a year—not of necessity rice, since they have a big surplus now, but beans or peas or some other vegetable which will keep their farmers busy all the year round and bring in more income.

The Government hopes also to generate power and that might make a considerable change some day in the life of the people.

YOU wouldn't think people would be so careless with the stuff, but the Mercantile Trust Co. has found itself with $162,689.91 which has been left in their care and then either forgotten, abandoned or rather pointedly ignored for five years or more.

You may have noticed the full-page ad the Mercantile Trust had in the Post-Dispatch the other day, with the heading, "IS ONE OF THESE UNCLAIMED DEPOSITS YOURS?" followed by a list of 568 names of depositors the bank couldn't locate, and the amount each is entitled to. The sums range from $50 to nearly $5000. About two thirds of the accounts are savings accounts and one third checking accounts.

WE COULDN'T FIND OUR NAME on the list, but nonetheless we were curious about so much unclaimed money, so we trotted down to the bank to find out what gives with such people, and what becomes of the money.

In time we found ourselves talking to Joe Ganser, the cashier, and Ted Richardson, head of the savings department. Just what gives with people, Ganser assured us, is something all banks have been wondering about for years. As to what becomes of the money, it remains right there in the bank, safe and untouched. If such a depositor comes back in 50 years, or his descendants come back in 100 years, and they can provide proof of ownership, the money will be there for them.

SOME 40 YEARS AGO, Ganser explained, the state passed a law that every five years every state bank has to publish a list of unclaimed deposits of $50 or more. Missouri is one of many states that has such a law. National banks don't have to do it. The list has to be published twice, the two publications a week apart.

An unclaimed deposit, Ganser says, is one which has shown no activity for five years or more. No deposits, no withdrawals, no inquiries from the depositor. While some of them are comparatively new and are in this category now for the first time, many of them have appeared on the list many times, and probably will appear many times more. One, for instance, for a sum of $95.25, belonging to a woman whose address is, or was, Braeman Lodge Horsely, Sussex, England, has been there since 1919 and has been advertised every five years since. No word from Braeman Lodge Horsely.

THERE ARE QUITE A NUMBER of business firms, no longer in existence, on the list, with deposits of from $100 to $500. This is usually explained by the fact that when the firm went out of business they paid out everything they had and their account was zero. But payee may have mislaid a check, or forgot to cash it, so they are still credited with that much in the bank.

Every time the list hits the street, the telephones of both Ganser and Richardson start ringing. Sometimes it's the people themselves, sometimes it's someone who knows something about them. If it is the depositor himself, one of two things will happen. Either he was perfectly aware of the money's existence and a little sore because they published his name in the paper, or he didn't know about it and is grateful. Sometimes it's a son or daughter or a grandchild. One man called whose mother had just died. He didn't know about the nearly $500 she had in the bank and was worried about how he was going to pay the funeral expenses. He was very grateful.

ONE YOUNG WOMAN called who knew she had a few dollars in the bank, but was quite surprised to learn that she had more than $600. It developed that her mother, before her death, had been adding to her account without telling her. She took a trip abroad.

The even sum of $100 appears quite often in the list. That, Ganser said, is the amount a lot of people open an account with. Then many of them just leave it there because they derive a sense of security from just knowing it's there.

LAWYERS ALWAYS CHECK the list carefully to see if any estates they are administering are represented there, and the public administrator does the same. People who spot names of people they know call to report on them. Like the man who called while we were at Ganser's desk. He was a real estate operator, and he had once sold a house to a man whose name was on the list, but the man had long since moved to California.

All a person who finds his name on the list has to do to get his money is show up at the bank, present proper proof, and the money is his. In the case of relatives of people who have died, they have to present not only proof but a copy of the will. Granddaughter Mary might try to claim the money, when the will says it goes to grandson John.

THE LAW REQUIRES only that accounts of $50 or more be published. There are several thousand more accounts in the bank under that amount, we were told by Richardson in the savings department. For two or three months before publication time, Richardson says, the bank conducts an intensive campaign to find the people by mail and telephone. They trace people through former neighbors and friends, and find a lot of them. This year, for instance, they had a list of 1400, which they reduced to 568 by publication time.

In the savings department, it's usually just a change of address. "I know about the money," people say. "I just moved, that's all." In the savings department they clear up about half the cases with each publication. The percentage is much lower among unclaimed checking accounts.

A SAVINGS ACCOUNT, incidentally, draws interest only for five years if there has been no activity. Then it goes into unclaimed accounts and stops drawing interest. There are some savings accounts which have been unclaimed since 1904.

Just how much money there is lying unclaimed in banks around the country today is something that is impossible to estimate, Richardson says, but it gives you something to think about. Millions, no doubt.

LUCIUS BEEBE, official historian of Nevada's fabulous Virginia City and all surrounding territory, tells of two cowboys who recently revived the code of the old West and opened fire on the broad highway in the bang-bang Jesse James tradition. These cowpokes were not very good shots, but bystanders sought shelter hastily beneath hot-dog stands and a delivery wagon full of laundry.

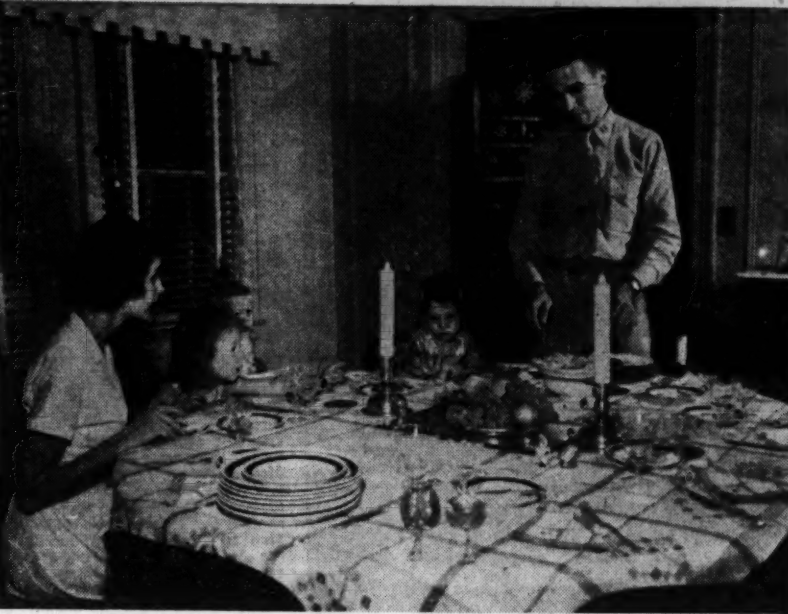

Several bullets lodged in the laundry bundles, and one local wit declared that for the first time in laundering history, the proprietor had a legitimate excuse for the condition in which he returned his customers' shirts.

Life in Nevada, says Beebe, is like this: One ancient met another who was totting under his arms two loaves of bread and six bottles of whisky.

"Land's sake, Lem," he marveled, "What in heck you gonna do with all that bread?"

Marine Capt. Dick McCutchen Wants to 'Know Why and How of Everything,' Cooking Included

By Virginia Irwin
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.

IT took just five weeks for television to lift Marine Corps Capt. Richard S. McCutchen from comparative obscurity as an ROTC instructor at Ohio State University and turn him into something of a national hero. To a considerable portion of an estimated 50,000 viewers of "The $64,000 Question" television program, McCutchen is the iron-nerved Marine who dared what no other contestant on the program has so far done. He reached for—and walked off with—the title prize.

With his popularity steadily building since his first appearance on "The $64,000 Question" on Aug. 16 when a surprised audience heard him choose "food and cooking" as his question category, 28-year-old Dick finished in a blaze of glory last Tuesday night when he romped through a seven-part question based on the courses served at a banquet in Buckingham Palace in 1949.

Having cleared the last hurdle, the six-foot Marine accepted the $64,000 prize and after the television studio audience had finished shouting a chandelier-shaking ovation, he made it clear to reporters that neither his new found fame nor the financial reward would make any difference in his way of life. He's going to invest most of what's left after taxes of his prize money for the education of his three young daughters; perhaps use a small amount to pay rent on larger living quarters for his family; and just maybe buy a new car to replace his broken-down 1952 Austin.

A career marine and the son of a retired Navy captain, McCutchen has lived in many parts of the world. He is something of a linguist and is especially expert in Spanish and French. A voracious reader, with a retentive memory, he has an insatiable curiosity about words and their derivations, about facts and reasons behind everything under the sun. He is a man who "likes it possible to know the why and how of everything."

"If I start reading a book before bedtime I have to get up and take a walk to clear my mind before I can go to sleep," McCutchen says in attempting to explain his "curious" mind. "If I'm reading and turn out the light and try to go to sleep my mind just keeps churning."

Answer to Question 1. A psychologist made a highly technical study of traits which both men and women agree belong generally to each sex. Both men and women agreed that men are more absent-minded than women. They also agreed on the following: Men are "sedate and calm," women, "agile and active"; men, "inclined to indolence," women, "mostly busy"; men, "cautious," women, "impulsive"; men, "satisfied with themselves," women, "not"; men, "greedy for money," women (generally), "not interested in money." I'd like to debate on that last point.

Answer to Question 2. True. Sleep studies show each person has a pretty regular "sleep pattern"—periods of deep slumber, half-waking periods, almost awake, tossing about. Deepest sleep usually occurs during the first hour, then gradually tapers off with increasing squirms and twits until final awakening. Some, however, fall into a short period of deep sleep just before waking—the darkest hour before the dawn. The easiest time to awaken a person is just after he has moved or turned over.

The Captain's 'Pet' Recipes

WHAT kind of food does the winner of $64,000 as an expert on cooking like? Here are three of his "pet" recipes, as given by Capt. Richard E. McCutchen:

Chicken Broiled With Orange Butter

One frying chicken split in half; juice of half orange; one quarter teaspoon nutmeg; one-half stick butter. Heat broiler 10 minutes at 500 degrees. Melt butter in sauce pan, add nutmeg and orange juice. Stir well and remove from fire. Using pastry brush, coat chicken well all over with butter mixture. Place under flame in broiler and cook 10 minutes to side, basting several times with remaining butter—nutmeg—orange sauce.

Chinese Beansprout Omelette

For each serving use: Two large eggs; one-half cup drained canned beansprouts; one-half stick butter; salt and pepper; one-fourth cup milk. Break eggs in bowl, add salt, pepper and milk. Mix thoroughly. Have two skillets handy. Place one skillet over medium flame; the other over low flame. Divide butter into skillets. Put beansprouts in low flame skillet; eggs in medium flame skillet. Use both hands—one to stir beansprouts so they won't burn, the other hand to stir eggs. When eggs are beginning to firm but are still runny, place beansprouts over one half the eggs and fold remaining half of eggs over beansprouts. Allow to remain in skillet for few seconds to firm.

Flaming Bananas

Six ripe bananas, one-half stick butter, sugar, one-half cup dark rum. Peel bananas and rub with softened butter. Sugar all over and place on cookie sheet. Bake in oven until lightly brown on all sides. Remove from oven and place in chafing dish. Heat rum and pour over bananas. Light and serve.

There are a million other things I want to know on the subject that maybe aren't in the particular book I'm studying or reading."

It was this insatiable curiosity that led Dick to his present remarkable knowledge of food and cooking. Not satisfied to simply follow a recipe as do many amateur chefs—both men and women—he had to know the origin of the recipe, the climatic and soil conditions under which the ingredients in the recipe were grown, what qualities in the ingredients combined to produce a certain flavor or taste. His curiosity also led him to try many strange dishes such as a Korean delicacy, raw spider crabs with red peppers. Some of the strange dishes he accepted with relish; others he rejected; still others he adapted to suit his own and his family's palates, such as his recipe for Chinese beansprout omelette, which appears in the accompanying box.

Born Jan. 24, 1927, at Long Beach, Calif., the son of Navy Capt. John C. McCutchen and Carvel Mercer McCutchen, one of whose ancestors was John Francis Mercer, once Governor of Maryland and aide de camp to General George Washington, Dick inherited an interest in food from his father.

"I did a lot of fishing with my father and he taught me to clean, prepare and cook our catch," he reminisces. "Dad was an even better cook than my mother. My interest in cooking grew and it has never stopped."

Enlisting in the Navy at 17, Dick was sent to boot camp at Sampson, N.Y., and in due time was assigned as master-at-arms in the mess. He began poking his nose deeper into the fascinating field of food. In the latter part of World War II, he studied at the University of Mississippi under the V-12 officer training program and after the war completed his education at Tulane University, obtaining a bachelor of arts degree in languages in 1949.

A member of the Naval ROTC at Tulane, he was appointed a Marine second lieutenant in June, 1949, and ordered to the basic school for Marine Corps officers at Quantico, Va. He completed the school in June 1950 and served briefly on its staff as an instructor.

In August 1950, Capt. McCutchen joined the Reconnaissance Company, Second Marine Division, at Camp Lejeune, N.C., to serve with that unit as a platoon leader and later became company operations and intelligence officer. Promoted to first lieutenant in June, 1951, he sailed the following June for Europe to take command of the Embassy Guard in Paris.

In France, renowned for its foods and cooking, I really began to study French cuisine," he said. "I had always appreciated French cooking since I attended school in New Orleans from 1942 to 1944 and learned to appreciate the specialties of the Creole restaurants there."

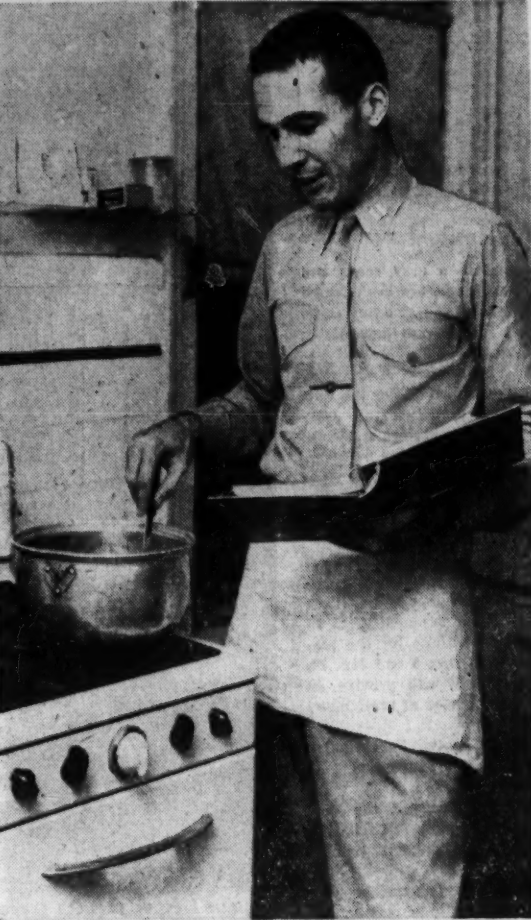

RETURNING to the United States from Paris in October 1953 Dick was promoted to captain in January of last year and left immediately for Japan to take command of a mortar company with the Third Marine Division, and then was transferred to the First Marine Division in Korea. In January of this year he was assigned to the staff of the Naval ROTC Unit, Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

Married in June, 1949, to the former Betsy Griffen, a fellow student at Tulane University, the Captain has three little girls, Sherrill, 4½ years old; Anne, 2½; and Catherine, 1½. He and his wife have kept from the youngsters any sense of excitement over his new found fame and fortune.

"The two oldest girls saw me in a news reel on television," he laughed. "They thought I was on some sort of cooking program since the news reel showed me bending over a stove with a stepman in my hand. They didn't get excited. They've seen me at a stove before."

McCutchen wrote a letter to "The $64,000 Question" the first week in July saying that he'd like to be on the program because he wanted the first $64,000 question to be won by a Marine. He wound up the letter by asking, "Does this sound excessively chauvinistic?"

He appeared on the program for the first time on Aug. 16, quickly disposed of the first set of questions on "food and cooking," and in successive weeks as tension mounted among television viewers, tossed off answers to the $8000, $16,000 and $32,000 questions.

CAPT. MCCUTCHEN IN THE KITCHEN. . . HE ISN'T CONTENT JUST TO FOLLOW A RECIPE, HE HAS TO KNOW ALL ABOUT IT.

And then last Tuesday came the $64,000 Question. According to the program rules, any contestant "going" for the major prize, may have the help of any expert he selects. Capt. McCutchen chose his father, saying with a grin that "The Navy supports the Marines. So I decided to call upon the Navy for help—my dad."

McCutchen and his father entered the soundproof booth that has come to be known as "the pressure cooker" and only a few seconds later, after conferring with his father only momentarily on a couple of points, the captain had "bagged the $64,000 prize."

Asked if winning the $64,000 question might tempt him to forsake the service for perhaps an academic career which would give exercise to his penchant for study, the Captain shook his head emphatically. "I'm in the Marines until they kick me out," he said. McCutchen is concerned on only one point in connection with the fame that smacked him so quickly in the past few weeks.

Contract Bridge

WHEN declarer can win a trick in either hand, his own or dummy's, he is apt to base his decision on where he wants the lead to be, and in many cases, of course, this is the only pertinent consideration. Sometimes, however, the next lead is of secondary importance—declarer must choose the card to win with on quite a different basis. For example: South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

West led the spade jack, and declarer, wanting to lead trumps toward his holding, put up dummy's spade king. He then led the heart deuce.

Actually, this gave East a problem. South might have K-J of trumps, and if East ducked, South might finesse and lose to West's queen. However, after only a little thought, East decided that that was too remote a chance, so he put up the trump ace and returned the spade queen. South played the ace, and West ruffed. In effect that was the death knell of the contract since the defenders were sure to get a spade trick and a club.

South was guilty of a serious slip when he took the first trick in dummy. East had bid spades at the two-level, vulnerable, on a suit lacking the ace, king and jack. Surely, then, he probably had a six-card suit, which meant that the jack was probably a singleton. In short, South should have foreseen the ruff because of the information given him in the bidding.

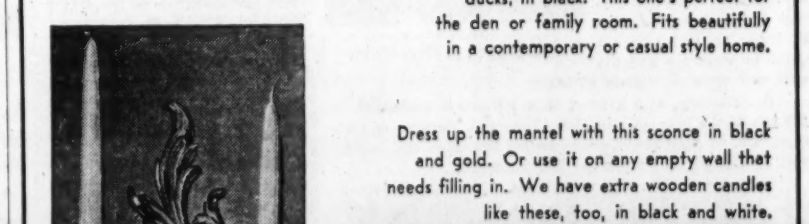

Obviously, then, South should have taken the first trick with the spade ace, then led a diamond to dummy's king in order to return a trump. If East put up the trump ace immediately, to return a spade, West could ruff, but dummy's king would be preserved. Thereafter, declarer could regain the lead and draw trumps.

The only point was to make it impossible for West to ruff one of North-South's high spades.

University Club Plans Formal Social Season

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

AN attractive program, enclosed in a gray cover and illustrated with pen and ink drawings, has been issued by the entertainment committee of the University Club, listing the club's social activities for the fall and winter season.

Parties will begin with the annual "After the Ball Supper, where the prettiest girls in town and their beaux meet," to be given the night of Oct. 4 after the coronation of the Veiled Prophet Queen at Kiel Auditorium.

Saturday Club Nights, introduced last season, became so popular that they will be resumed Oct. 13 and continue for the season except the holiday period between Dec. 3 and Jan. 14. Members are advised that dance music will provide an opportunity to see how much you remember of the Mambo lessons you just took.

"Don't hang around home like a coconut" on Sunday evenings beginning Oct. 16 when buffet suppers will be held at the clubhouse.

Two football specials have been arranged, the first on Oct. 22 for the Purdue-Notre Dame game at Lafayette, Ind., and the second, Nov. 5 for the Oklahoma-Missouri game at Columbia.

A Gay '90s party is scheduled for Saturday night, Nov. 12. Advertised as the party when "everyone gets in the act," the home talent "may sing, dance, recite and play anything from a piccolo to a sawed-off oil drum, or just laugh."

The big party of the year will be Saturday, Dec. 3. Details are secret, but "sweethearts of the U. Club" will again have an opportunity to wear their Veiled Prophet ball gowns and the men, their white ties and tails. Both the twelfth and thirteenth floors will be reserved for the occasion and admittance will be by card to those with advance reservations.

The annual meeting, for active members only, will be held Dec. 6, and the traditional Christmas party, with special dinner music, Santa Claus and carol singing, is to be given Sunday, Dec. 18.

On New Year's day the University Club will again hold open house. One of the most popular days on the club calendar, it is the one on which the chef "shines" and "crowds are as thick as dropped r's on the Harvard Club floor."

Martha Carr's OPINION=

Dear Martha:

I HAVE been married a year to my second husband. My first husband and I were divorced after 17 years, ending what seemed an eternity of drunkenness and abuse for me and my two children, now 14 and 10. My present husband has a dual personality. He is good to the children and me, but on the other hand he is insanely jealous of us. When the children, on rare occasions, spend a day with their father, my husband goes down into the depths of a mood that is beyond description. The children aren't allowed to play with others. I am not supposed to associate with my neighbors, nor am I allowed to visit my relatives here in the city. He works nights and I drive the car so there's no reason why the children and I couldn't go out in the evening. Despite all this, I love him. I have thought of leaving him but get sick at the thought. What can I do to change his outlook? I have babied and petted him but this failed. I have tried to reason, I have ignored his questions. This man is 15 years my senior. Truly, from day to day I don't know whether to expect him to treat me like a father pampering a delicate child or a tyrannical ruler. Thank goodness he doesn't drink.

That's one good thing, I'll admit, but you have yourself a real battle on the other scores of jealousy and temperament. But if you still love him, despite his faults, and you feel that he really does care for you and the children, you certainly have some basis for hope that you can change the picture. I do, however, think you are wrong in placidly accepting his orders that neither you nor the children can have any friends. Your first loyalty, of course, is to him and your family and home, but you can't have any semblance of a wholesome and happy marriage if you're scared to death all the time. Seek professional counseling from your pastor or one of the community family agencies. It isn't fair to him, to the children, or to yourself to let it go on like this.

Dear Martha:

MY SISTER-IN-LAW and I have an unusual problem. We have tried to get my mother (her mother-in-law) to come spend a day with us. We live close by, so there is no problem of transportation. She has promised continuously to come, but never has. Could you give us some advice as to what to do?

I wouldn't worry too much unless she acts as though she is hurt or offended, in which case you'd want to find out the trouble and do what you can to remedy it. If you know she will be home on a certain day, why not fix up a little lunch and drop in on her? Maybe she has a horror of becoming a nuisance to her in-laws. Don't make an issue of it.

IN ANSWER TO Miriam: If a bride's parents are not living, her older sister may issue the wedding invitation. It would read, "Miss Jane Doe requests the honour of your presence at the marriage of her sister Barbara Doe, etc."

Martha Carr has compiled a leaflet of prayers for children and grace to be said at table. Send today for your free copy, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

What Comes After?

By Ruth Millett

THE teen-age girls in our neighborhood are avid followers of a daytime TV give-away show.

To them there must be something stirringly romantic about a wife sitting in a chair on a raised platform, all eyes upon her, while her husband tries to answer enough questions to get her a wardrobe, a mink coat and a trip to some faraway place.

But as most of the men falter and miss the question that would give their wives the big pay-off, I can't help but think that the really dramatic part of the story never gets before the TV camera at all.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN MOM AND POP are out of the studio? How does pop explain the fact that he didn't know the answer to the question that would give his wife a chance to snuggle into a mink coat and start packing for a long, long trip?

How does he regain her faith in him as a man worth looking up to?

Does he promise to try his luck on another give-away show? Or does he struggle to get out of his undignified position by saying "It was all your idea, and it turned out just as I expected it to and I don't want to ever hear that word 'pay-off' again?"

DOES HE TAKE THE EASY WAY OUT by promising to buy his wife at least a mink stole, or take her on at least a weekend trip to the nearest city in order to get back in her good graces?

How do the husbands who don't win the big pay-off square themselves with their disappointed and disillusioned wives? That's what I'd like to know.

I'd be willing to bet that some of those husbands are still paying off six months after they flunk out on a quiz show.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

AFTER applying face powder my skin looks like canvas cloth. What can I do? Also, my skin has little bumps under the surface—L. B.

First wash with a good soap and rinse your skin several times. Blot dry and then apply cosmetic oil using it as a powder base. Press on face powder with a cocticed cotton square. Your skin needs the lubrication of cosmetic oil once a day. After cleansing, pat your skin with an astringent lotion. Also check the shade of your face powder. Choose a shade a little deeper than your skin tone. If you use rouge I suggest cream rouge, or use a touch of your lipstick to give a little color to your cheeks.

"I AM 51, just starting on a job as I am a widow. What kind of clothes should a mature woman wear? The office is nice. I am to be a receptionist. Also what kind of manners are required?"—M. L.

Choose simple basic dresses of navy blue or black, and have as many changes of accessories as possible. Graciousness is badly lacking in the average office. Treat people as you would like to be treated. You will earn a real place in the business world. Keep a memo pad handy to jot down important data—a person unaccustomed to business is apt to forget. And good luck from Beauty After Forty.

It's Husbands Who Spoil U.S. Wives

Women Don't Like It, but Men Do It to Build Status, Says Psychologist

By Pauline Sterling

DETROIT, Sept. 19 (AP).—RE American women spoiled? European and American men both say "yes."

American women don't have anything to do, the men say. Their homes run without them—by automation. And, they have the "gimmies."

A man, they say, has to keep showering his wife with new automatic gadgets and fur coats, none of which keeps them satisfied for more than a few weeks. But who spoiled them?

Their men!

A psychologist, a man at that, is quick to admit it.

Dr. William Wattenberg, of the Wayne University psychology department, says, "American men want their wives spoiled. It's the only way they can assert their own importance. A man has to feel he's the rock of the house, the one who has to dash home and cut logs for the fireplace when the heater goes on the blink—the one who has to put on the screens and storm doors."

"He goes to any extreme to preserve his superiority."

Dr. Wattenberg calls attention to many ruses man will use to preserve and flaunt his superiority:

The man in the supermarket—he's not there pushing the cart around because his wife wants him to. He likes to think he's the one who is strong enough to carry the heavy grocery bag to the car and into the house.

All the labor saving devices in the home—it's the man who insists upon buying them. It gives him a sense of pride. Makes him feel and look successful.

When the family goes on a trip, who does the driving? The man. It makes him feel essential. And when something goes wrong with the car, he fixes it. He's the one who saves the situation.

And look what's happening in the kitchen.

It used to be that Mother and the girls would spend most of Sunday morning preparing dinner. It was the big event of the week.

Now Dad is building barbecues in the back yard. Not only that, he thinks he's the only one who can charcoal-broil a steak. His wife is permitted to mix the sauce for the steak—maybe toss a salad. But it's the man who is king of the backyard grill.

And why do men go in for this do-it-yourself craze?

Dr. Wattenberg knows the answer to that one, too. "It's certainly not to save money," he says.

MEN buy and use expensive tools, make slaves of themselves because it gives them more status, he feels.

"European men resent the way we Americans spoil our wives," he adds. "They think it's awful. But they don't blame the men. They blame the women for letting men spoil them."

"I'm not sure we men haven't gotten ourselves into an unhappy dilemma. Now that we have made ourselves completely happy by making our wives useless and ourselves useful—the women don't like it."

Women don't feel needed. They know the house will almost run itself. If they take a job, the men complain (that undermines their ego). About all that's left for them is an imaginary illness to get attention or demands for more gifts so they can kid themselves into thinking the man thinks they're worth them, Dr. Wattenberg says.

So what's the solution?

Dr. Wattenberg thinks of two: 1. Man could become more demanding. He could go home crying for attention and sympathy for his own feigned illness and let his wife minister to him.

2. He could throw out all the gadgets—all the automatic equipment. Also get rid of the car and insist upon hikes instead of drives.

On second thought, maybe neither would work, the doctor says.

International Pattern

DESIGNS by Elly Kriech are gaining wide acceptance with our fashion-minded young sophisticates. This version of the important, new tunic clearly exhibits her success in combining a knowledge of European couture with the fresh American approach to clothes that do double duty and do both jobs well. Decorative tabs trim the detachable, flared tunic and button it to the slim sheath. Worn without the tunic, the sheath reveals its own interesting tab detail. A soft bias fold finishes the flattering U-shaped neckline. The sheath alone is perfect for office wear or, if you are college bound, for innumerable campus activities. Button on the tunic and you're ready for dinner in town. Fabric suggestions are light weight woolsens, wool crepe, shantung, faille, plain or printed silks, linen and novelty cottons.

"Loads of hot water for housework," says Mrs. Vernon Triefenbach. "No matter when I want to wash clothes, clean house, or do dishes—I just turn on the faucet and there's all the hot water I need. I wouldn't be without our electric water heater. And the cost is so low, it's a real bargain."

MRS. VERNON TRIEFENBACH

"When I shave or take a shower, I want lots of hot water," says Mr. Triefenbach, "and I always get it—even if my wife has just finished doing dishes or our boy has just taken a shower. That's why I like our electric water heater. It's the greatest convenience we have. I'm completely sold on it."

Chance of Thunderstorms

The late summer heat wave is expected to continue tomorrow in the St. Louis area. Meteorologist Harry P. Wahlgren said today. With rainfall for the year lagging almost six inches below normal, he said there is a chance of thunderstorms.

Maximum temperature rose here yesterday to 82 degrees, making it the fifth consecutive day with a reading of 90 or more. Wahlgren said this was the second time in seven years that September has had five such days.

Last night's average temperature during normal sleeping hours—10 p.m. to 7 a.m. today—was a warm 77.2. Minimum in the state this morning varied from 51 at Farmington to 77 at Kansas City, and over the nation from 25 at Ely, Nev., to 80 at Corpus Christi, Tex.

Readings in Missouri yesterday were all in the 90s with the high, 96, at St. Charles. Maximum temperatures of 90 or more were recorded in the Lakes region as far north as Will YOUR Scalp GROW 83 Feet of Hair Today?

Sounds incredible, doesn't it? Yet scientific research tells us that on the average healthy head of hair there are 121,630 hairs—and each of these hair grows about 1/4 inch per month. This means that your scalp needs to grow about 83 feet of hair each day if it is to remain in a healthy, non-balding condition.

Usually the rate of hair-growth decreases because the hair follicles (tiny tubes out of which hairs grow) become clogged with cement-like deposits of keratin debris. Various local infections related to different types of dandruff also may inhibit hair growth.

Can this "slow-down" be prevented? Yes, in most cases it can. Thomas Specialists KNOW how to reactivate your clogged follicles and KNOW how to live up dry and lifeless hair. Thomas technique is based on 35 years of experience PLUS a new keratin dissolving process which greatly speeds up response to treatment.

Come in today and find out for yourself exactly how Thomas treatment can help you. See how it has helped others to keep their hair healthy and active. No charge is made for a complete scalp examination at any time.

SHE DANCED at his Wedding

By Vida Hurst

CHAPTER NINE.

AFTERWARDS Donna wondered at the patience Peter Grant displayed. Instead of upbraiding her he said cheerfully, "If you are referring to our plan to be married today there is nothing compulsory about it. I'm not going to drag you to the altar by brute force. In fact," he continued, "I'm withdrawing my offer. It seemed like an excellent idea at the time."

"It was a wonderful idea," she insisted, mopping at her eyes with the handkerchief he handed her.

"Then what are you crying about?"

"Because I can't go on with it. Because I can't substitute another man for Arthur."

"I thought you realized that Arthur is out of the picture."

"I do but that doesn't mean I can marry someone else. We're not in love. We might even hate each other."

"Speak for yourself, Donna. You've a right to decide your own course of action but not mine."

"That's true," she admitted. "Oh, Peter, I'm so disgusted with myself. I know how this must look to you. Please forgive me."

"I'd rather have you change your mind now than later," he said.

ARTHUR would have smirked for days, Donna reflected, but perhaps Peter wasn't as disappointed as she had believed. His face showed no indication of it as he poured his second cup of coffee and made more toast.

"Eat your breakfast, dear," he urged as if she were a little girl. "I really pride myself on this coffee."

Reassured by his attitude, Donna obeyed. Her spirits rose as they finished eating. He offered to help with the dishes but she refused.

"You've done enough," she said.

DONNA MEADOWS, hired by ARTHUR PRENTISS, in whose business she has invested some money, is heart broken as she reflects on the wedding to ENID MARCH. As she reads the obituary notice of PETER GRANT, who offers to take her to the reception. He is to become Arthur's partner in the business and Donna knows he has been blind to her. She leaves the reception to go dancing. Peter tries to cheer up Donna. Peter takes her home at 4 a.m., asking if he may call her at 7 that night. On their second evening together Peter asks Donna to marry him. She refuses because she still loves Arthur. When she returns Peter at 8 a.m. He repeats his offer to marry her. Donna agrees but then backs out.

"Don't you want me to take you to the office? Or have you changed your mind about that too?"

She answered meekly, "I'll be there later. But you needn't wait."

"There's no hurry," he assured her. "If you really want to wash the dishes I'll read the paper."

Donna smiled as she cleared the table. He was the most stubborn individual she had ever known. Rather pleased by this conclusion she finished her task and not until then did she realize she hadn't once thought about Arthur. Even in comparison.

If Peter would be patient, she believed he would be the situation might work out for them after all. When the phone rang Donna answered it without feeling the usual down beat of her heart because it couldn't possibly be Arthur.

IT WAS Arthur's mother with a warmth in her voice compounded of affection and sympathy. Everyone knew no matter how they concealed it that Arthur's parents preferred Donna to the girl from New York their son had married. Donna wondered what they would think if they could have seen the young man who sat on her doorstep reading the paper and smoking as if he belonged there. They might be surprised but their loyalty would not permit them to be shocked. If Peter Grant was in Donna's apartment at 8 o'clock in the morning there would be a legitimate reason. Just the same Donna had no intention of mentioning it.

"I realize it's early to be calling you," Mrs. Prentiss was saying. "But I wanted to talk to you before you left for the office. I suppose you're going?"

Her tone implied that she wouldn't blame Donna if she didn't go but she sighed with relief when Donna said sensibly, "Of course. I promised Arthur I would keep the office open. It will give Mr. Grant a chance to get used to things."

She added demurely, conscious of Peter's grin.

"That reminds me," Mrs. Prentiss said. "How do you like him?"

"Very much," the girl replied. "I think the three of us can work together satisfactorily if that's what you mean."

"It wasn't exactly, although naturally we hope you can, Enid said that you left the reception together but Arthur thought she must be mistaken."

At the mention of Arthur's wife, pain struck again.

"I don't see that it matters," Donna said dully.

"Don't talk that way, darling. You know how Arthur's father and I feel about you. The bitterest tears I have ever shed were when Arthur told us he intended to marry Enid."

"I know," Donna said, anxious to end the conversation. "That's the reason I went to his wedding. But now that they're married it's bound to be different."

"Not where we are concerned. Enid is a smart girl and if she makes my boy happy I'll be nice to her but to my dying day you'll be the one Arthur should have married."

Neither of them suspected how true this prophecy would prove to be.

"That's nice of you, Mama Prentiss," Donna said, knowing the affectionate title would please her. "But I don't think we should discuss it."

"I suppose not," the older woman sighed. "I called to invite you to dinner Saturday night. They'll be home then and

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

Portrait of Tamerlane and his tomb at Samarkand.

During a few periods in history, the human race has been hurt by the rise of wicked men who became "conquerors." These persons have caused sorrow past all understanding.

The white race has produced a share of such individuals, including Alexander, Napoleon and Hitler. From the yellow, or Mongolian, race have come Attila the Hun, Genghis Khan, Tamerlane and other masters of horror.

The last of the Mongol leaders I have named actually had the name of Timur. After he became lame, people called him Timur-i Leng, meaning Timur the Lame. This was changed, in time, to Tamerlane.

We might hardly expect a conqueror to start spreading his power from the heart of Asia, but it was there—six centuries ago—that Tamerlane opened his mad career. In Turkistan he helped Hosain, his brother-in-law, to conquer the country. Hosain and Tamerlane ruled jointly for four years, but then fell to quarreling. Hosain was murdered.

Having made himself the sole ruler of Turkistan, Tamerlane led an army outside the borders. He spread his power among the Mongol tribes, and also won victories against Persians and Turks.

Building up his empire at the cost of blood and suffering, the lame leader attacked city after city. The people in the cities were slaughtered after surrendering.

The lust for power seemed never to die in Tamerlane, as long as he could breathe. At length he invaded India, and won much of the northern part of the country. Then he set out to invade China, but this time he was checkmated. A fever overtook him, and he met death. His empire at that time stretched from the Volga River to the Himalayas, but it soon fell to pieces.
